Purpose of this statement

The purpose of this Statement is to comply with the obligations of the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth)

Introduction

Australia has modern slavery laws in place designed to ensure businesses report publicly and responsibly on the risks of modern slavery in their operations and supply chains.

Modern slavery is an umbrella term for a number of a number of serious exploitative work practices that represents violations of human rights.

The Commonwealth Modern Slavery Act 2018 defines modern slavery under eight heads of serious exploitation:

- Human trafficking
- Slavery
- Servitude
- Forced or servile marriage
- Forced labour
- Debt bondage
- The worst forms of child labour
- Deceptive recruiting for labour or services to exploit victims and undermine or deprive them of their freedom

Barro Group's registered office is 191 Drummond Street Carlton Vic 3053.

Supply Chain

Barro Group's operations are vertically integrated and our supply chain consists largely of raw materials required to manufacture products such as concrete, to services and goods required for us to conduct our business, such as

- Consumables like fuel, machinery and equipment parts
- Fixed plant, heavy mobile earthmoving equipment, heavy transport vehicles and other motor vehicles
- Contracts with transport companies
- Contractors who support our operational requirements such as information technology and plant maintenance
- Employment contracts
- Cementitious materials and other raw materials
- Other supplies include electronic security, labour hire, steel, builders supplies, stationery, telephones, computers, uniforms, cleaners, personal protective equipment, lawyers, consultants

The most significant and highest value spend relates to the purchase of raw materials such as cementitious products and aggregates for the manufacture of concrete. Over 95% of our large and small suppliers are based in Australia with some of these sourcing from outside Australia.

Suppliers based outside Australia (in the USA, Malaysia and Italy) have been assessed, including a site visit to the Malaysia supplier's facility, and we consider them to be of low risk. To a lesser extent, some purchases are indirectly made from Turkey and China through a third party who has visited the applicable sites and we have received declarations that these are compliant with modern slavery protocols so we consider these too to be of low risk.

Risk of Modern Slavery practices in our operations and supply chains

We continue to assess the risk of modern slavery in our operations as being low risk as most suppliers operate in Australia and they are required to comply with the Modern Slavery Act within their own supply chains.

We strive to engage suppliers with a good reputation, high ethical standards and reliable business practices.

We have strong employment policies and procedures for recruitment, selection and appointment, including right to work in Australia and comprehensive pre-employment screening. We consider there is no risk in our directly employed workforce due to the highly regulated labour market in Australia. Any labour hire is through regulated and accredited labour hire providers only.

We encourage reporting of misconduct within our business and the supply chain without recrimination.

Supply contracts or service engagements are entered into under Barro Group's standard terms and conditions of purchase. Prequalification, evaluation, assessment and approval processes are undertaken prior to the engagement of contractors to ensure compliance with our terms and conditions of engagement which include compliance with the Modern Slavery Act.

We continue to assess the risk for potential high-risk suppliers particularly by geographical location where there could be a risk to unskilled workers being exploited by lax safety and labour laws or unfavourable human rights records.

We continue to monitor any organisation who provides cleaning services as we have identified that there could be a risk of migrant workers who are possibly on short-term visas being exploited. Where possible we directly engage with the actual person providing the cleaning services.

On-line training has been developed and is being undertaken annually by management and all employees with procurement responsibilities. The same training is provided to our regular contractors.

Policies and Governance

Barro Group has a strong framework of policies, standards and procedures that provide controls and guidance to our management and suppliers. These are communicated regularly including at initial induction and annual re-induction, and through contracts, purchase orders, assessments. Our suppliers are required to comply with our policies.

Breaches of our policies are considered serious and there are formal processes in place for policy breaches. For employees these may include re-training, formal warnings or employment termination, and for suppliers, termination of supply arrangements.

Effectiveness

We continue to identify risks and review our actions to ensure they are current and effective – in particular reviews procurement processes including contracts for products/services to ensure inclusion of modern slavery clauses for commitment and compliance

Consultation

Barro Group Pty Ltd and its reporting entities operate under the same policies and procedures and the same consistent approach applies to modern slavery.

Update and future focus

- Continue with supplier questionnaires after reviewing and updating content
- Continue to conduct high level risk assessment for key suppliers where procurement is direct from outside Australia and for cleaning companies to identify and address any actual or potential risks of modern slavery
- Continue to apply a consistent approach with our workforce, including training, and supply chain to ensure all aspects of our operations validate our ongoing commitment to eradicating Modern Slavery.
