The Kings Group's main operations include a fleet of courier vehicles ranging from bike couriers, vans and rigid trucks to semi-trailers and crane trucks. The Kings Group mainly specialises in intrastate urban deliveries, and is also capable of delivering interstate, nationally and into regional areas. The Kings Group also provides third party logistic solutions that include warehousing operations in Victoria.

Our Supply Chain

Today, the Kings Group has a presence in most of the capital cities across Australia and New Zealand, servicing a variety of multi-national and SME clients across the home delivery, industrial, consumer, e-commerce and health industry sectors.

Kings Group's supply chain supports the safe transportation of products manufactured and sold by our clients in the above industry sectors. Kings Group's supply chain operates in the 3PL environment, extending the delivery and logistical services offered by our clients to their customers through the use of company operated vehicles as well as subcontracted vehicles.

Kings Group's supply chains also includes services that contribute to its operations, such as the cleaning, maintenance and security companies that service Kings Group's offices and sites.

Risks of Modern Slavery in Operations and Supply Chains

Operating in the transport and logistics sector, we are aware of the potential of Kings Group to cause, contribute to or be linked to modern slavery through our operations and supply chains.

Taking into account the industry of the Kings Group, there is a risk of causing or contributing to modern slavery through the use of labour in vulnerable populations or through the engagement of recruitment agencies and subcontractors. The Kings Group is aware of these potential risks and the need to monitor and address these in an appropriate manner. Such risks include:

- Labour rights, including forced or compulsory labour, wages and benefits, work hours and child labour (including unskilled, temporary or seasonal labour)
- Health and safety (for workers that Kings Group do not control (or who are otherwise engaged in operations outside of Kings Group's control).

Kings Group works with a large network of suppliers, labour hire agencies, subcontractors and customers around the country and in New Zealand. This is also applicable to suppliers from which Kings Group source the products and services it requires to operate. Therefore, Kings Group is at risk of contributing to or being directly linked to modern slavery infringements relating to the activities of these business relations. Key steps that Kings Group has taken to assess and mitigate risks in this space include a questionnaire and declaration form assessing these suppliers modern slavery act obligations and how they are meeting them as well as working towards updating our contractor and supplier agreements to ensure they incorporate modern slavery provisions.

Actions taken to assess and address the risk of Modern Slavery

Kings Group is taking a methodical approach to implementing and introducing an ethical supply chain framework and increasing engagement with suppliers and subcontractors to identify risk, assess and address modern slavery.

Steps that Kings Group has taken to assess and mitigate risk within the company and in its supply chain include:

- working with suppliers and subcontractors to strengthen their internal policies and procedures;
- developing a supplier code of practice;
- implementing a Anti-Modern Slavery Policy;
- updating, reviewing and implementing relevant policies including; employment checks policy and contractor engagement checks policy;
- updating the Kings Whistleblower policy to ensure inclusion of protections for any notifications of modern slavery act breaches;
- working towards introducing updated contractor agreements;
- facilitating audits of our suppliers through a questionnaire and declaration against the modern slavery act obligations; and
- using its leverage to work with those in its supply chain to implement solutions that meet human rights standards.

Assessment & Effectiveness of our Actions

The Kings Group recognises the importance of monitoring how effective its anti-modern slavery processes are, and it has actively taken steps to put plans in place regarding its approach to assess and address modern slavery risks.

At Kings Group, we have utilised our network of employees to oversee the effectiveness of the relevant actions taken to address modern slavery. We intend to build upon this with the establishment of a working group from key areas of Kings Group such as, Procurement, People & Culture and Personnel. This working group will meet regularly to discuss actions taken and their effectiveness.

For our supply chain partners, we are currently working to better assess the effectiveness of our actions to address modern slavery. We are looking to establish processes and procedures for:

- scheduled internal audits of our suppliers;
- regular review and assessment of our actions by our Audit & Risk Committee;
- annual review of supplier declarations; and
- efficiently acknowledging and addressing any cases reported through grievance mechanisms.

The Kings Group recognises the need to continuously build on our understanding and management of modern slavery risks in our operations and supply chains and aims to continue to:

- build on our work from this financial year;
- address and assess the outcome of our anti-modern slavery actions within our organisation and our supply chain; and
- provide training to our employees regarding their obligations under any compliance policies.

Collaboration

Kings Group seeks to be the best. Kings Group is committed to working with its employees and subcontractors to improve its modern slavery response.

Kings Group will continue to engage with external stakeholders and take advice (where appropriate) to ensure contract arrangements are arranged and monitored in accordance with Australian employment law.
