We have arranged for appropriate consultation to be undertaken between us in relation to this Statement, in particular through reviews by personnel in our Upstream and Downstream business lines, and with the support of personnel in Procurement, Law, and other functions.

This Statement has been approved by the Board of Directors of each Reporting Entity. We are committed to respecting human rights as a fundamental principle in our operations.

2. Structure, operations and supply chains

Downstream operations

In Australia, Fiji and Papua New Guinea we are involved in the purchase, storage, distribution, marketing and sales of petroleum fuel products. Our operations include managing storage and distribution infrastructure to provide safe and reliable delivery of fuels to our customers. In February 2021, we announced that the Altona refinery will be converted to an import terminal and is expected to cease manufacturing operations during 2021.

Further information about our Australian operations is available at www.exxonmobil.com.au.

¹ A reference to "affiliate" is a reference to one of our related bodies corporate. Nothing in this statement is intended to override the corporate separateness of affiliated entities.

Upstream operations

In Australia, we operate a network of offshore platforms in Bass Strait that produce oil and gas. We process, store and transport these products at our onshore processing facilities in Longford and Long Island Point, for supply to customers. Further information about our Australian operations is available at www.exxonmobil.com.au.

In Papua New Guinea, ExxonMobil PNG Limited, a Controlled Entity of Mobil PNG Gas Holdings Pty Ltd, is the operator of the PNG LNG Project in which our affiliates together hold a ~33.2% participating interest.² The Project includes gas production and processing facilities, more than 700 kilometres of onshore and offshore pipeline, a gas conditioning plant in Hides, and a liquefaction and storage facility near Port Moresby. Further information about the operations of the PNG LNG Project is available at www.pnglng.com.

We also hold participating interests in, and operate, a number of exploration joint ventures in Papua New Guinea. Exploration activities in 2020 were significantly curtailed as a result of COVID-19.

Supply chains

Our operations require a wide variety of goods and services to operate, the majority of which are produced with higher-skilled and trained labour, including engineering and technical services, as well as specialized equipment and services for oil and gas operations that require vocational training.

Our supply chain includes purchasing refined petroleum products from suppliers located in Australia, as well as other countries. The majority of imported refined petroleum products was purchased from our affiliates. Refined petroleum products were also purchased from third parties located in Australia, and in other countries. In Australia, we also purchase crude oil from suppliers in Australia and other countries, to enable the manufacture of fuels for the Australian market at our Altona refinery. The crude supplied to the Altona refinery was purchased from our affiliates and from third parties located in Australia and in other countries. The production, operation and trading of refined petroleum products and crude oil generally require technical and professional skills and use of capital-intensive assets.

To support our operations, Procurement personnel steward the acquisition of other goods and services from third parties, including engineering, procurement and construction services, general maintenance and technical support services, chemicals, drilling services and equipment, transportation and logistics services, operations support services including supply vessels and catering services, temporary labour and specialist consultancies, and corporate services such as information technology (IT) and marketing support. Goods and services to support our operations were purchased from third parties located in the host country as well as from other countries.

Our operations also require marine transportation services via ocean-going cargo vessels.

Non-Operated Interests

We hold non-operated interests in a number of joint ventures in Australia, Papua New Guinea and Indonesia, including a 25% interest in the Gorgon natural gas project in Western Australia.

² Certain Controlled Entities including ExxonMobil PNG Limited and Mobil Oil New Guinea Limited are companies registered in Papua New Guinea. These Controlled Entities do not operate or conduct business in Australia. No Reporting Entity operates or conducts any business in Papua New Guinea.

3. Modern slavery risks

3.1 Assessment and description of the risks of modern slavery

For the purposes of preparing this statement, an analysis was undertaken of modern slavery³ risks in our operations and supply chains.

In our operations, we do not utilise forced or compulsory labour and forbid the use of children in our workforce. All of our employees are above the legal employment age in the country of their employment and are recruited and provided with working conditions and the payment of wages and benefits that comply with applicable laws and regulations. Our complex operations require deep technical skills. The majority of our employees are higher-skilled professionals and trained labour with technical degrees, including from scientific and engineering disciplines.

We note that since its inception in 2009, the PNG LNG Project has operated under a standalone Environmental and Social Management Plan (ESMP) that includes assessments of human rights risk, mitigation, verification, and other processes for the Project. Further information about the PNG LNG Project ESMP and related management plans is available at www.pnglng.com.

In the supply chain of our other operations there may be a potential for modern slavery risks in relation to refined petroleum products imported from non-affiliated sources; crude oil imported from non-affiliated sources; third party supplies of lower-skilled, physical labour, such as for facilities services and operations maintenance services (e.g. janitorial, catering, landscaping); and shipping.

While potential modern slavery risks exists in the supply chain of refined petroleum products and crude oil from non-affiliated sources in countries with a general prevalence of modern slavery risk, the production, operation and trading of these products generally require technical and professional skills and use of capital-intensive assets.

3.2 Actions taken to address modern slavery risks

We maintain a commitment to safeguarding the health and security of our employees and the public, responsibly managing our social impacts, and upholding respect for human rights in our operations. It is our policy to comply with all applicable laws and regulations, including those related to employment, safety, security, health and the environment.

We are committed to respecting human rights as a fundamental principle in our operations, reinforced through training and integrated into our policies and practices.

Standards, procedures and processes

Several key standards, procedures and processes guide our integrated approach to human rights: Standards of Business Conduct, Statement of Labor and the Workplace, and Operations Integrity Management Systems (OIMS).

³ As defined in the Modern Slavery Act.

Our practices reflect the spirit and intent of the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Elements of the United Nations' Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights also guide our approach to managing human rights.

Our Standards of Business Conduct are the principles that guide the conduct of our business operations by all employees at all levels. Through the Standards of Business Conduct, we commit to:

- being good corporate citizens in all the places where we operate;
- maintaining high ethical standards;
- obeying all applicable laws, rules and regulations; and
- respecting local and national cultures.

The Standards of Business Conduct include our Ethics Policy, which affirms our philosophy that the way results are achieved is as important as the results themselves, and states that even where the law is permissive, the course of highest integrity is chosen.

Our commitment to human rights is further supported by the Statement on Labor and the Workplace, which reinforces our support for the principles of the International Labour Organization 1998 Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work ("ILO Declaration"), notably the abolition of child labour, elimination of forced labour and workplace discrimination and harassment, and recognition of freedom of association.

Consistent with our Standards of Business Conduct and our Ethics Policy, we expect compliance by all officers and employees with applicable laws and regulations and prohibit conduct constituting modern slavery.

We operate through various standards, procedures and processes, which outline practices in various socioeconomic areas, including human rights. The OIMS under which we operate provides standards and expectations that may be used to identify, monitor, and manage ongoing risks, including in the area of human rights.

Addressing modern slavery risks in our supply chains

We hold our suppliers, vendors and contractors to stringent compliance, anti-corruption, non-conflict, safety and other guidelines and our standard terms and conditions oblige suppliers to adhere to all applicable laws and regulations.

For activities stewarded by Procurement personnel, we apply a rigorous set of standards and follow procedures that outline the requirements for acquiring goods and services, processes for qualifying suppliers, executing contracts and monitoring supplier performance during the contract term. Prior to awarding a contract to a new supplier, Procurement's due diligence process is designed to screen suppliers across a number of compliance areas (e.g. sanctions, anti-corruption, and human trafficking violations) using government and media databases.

The standard terms and conditions used by Procurement personnel oblige suppliers to adhere to all applicable laws and regulations, including those related to employment, safety, security, health and the environment, impose similar terms and conditions on their subcontractors, and permit audits and allow access to office and work locations, documentation and personnel. These standard terms also allow for termination if the supplier's performance is not acceptable. Enhanced contractual requirements with respect to human rights and modern slavery may also be utilised depending on the level of risk assessed.

We engage with suppliers that comply with local laws and respect human rights. Procurement personnel reiterate Supplier Expectations, including on human rights, on an annual basis through a Year End Supplier Letter sent to suppliers, vendors, and contractors that they steward. In 2020, letters were sent to more than 750 suppliers. The Supplier Expectations include:

- complying with laws, rules, and regulations applicable to their businesses;
- conducting operations and business practices in a manner consistent with ILO Declaration noted above; and
- managing activities in a manner that respects human rights and is consistent with the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights in effect as of 2011.

Throughout 2020, computer-based human rights awareness training was available to our employees, including Procurement personnel, to improve their understanding of human rights issues.

We do not own or operate cargo vessels. Any ocean going cargo vessels providing marine transportation services to us must, at a minimum, comply with the standards set out in the Maritime Labour Convention, which establishes minimum working and living standards for seafarers and imposes inspection requirements on ratifying states, including whether the vessels are in compliance with Convention requirements on seafarers' rights.

PNG LNG

The PNG LNG ESMP comprehensively addresses the requirements of OIMS and in addition is designed to secure compliance with IFC Performance Standards, local law, and relevant international conventions including the International Labour Organisation Core Conventions⁴. The ESMP includes specific management plans for Labour and Working Conditions, Procurement and Supply, and Stakeholder Engagement (including grievance management processes).

Non-operated joint ventures

We also hold interests in joint ventures that we do not operate. Our joint venture operators are required to adhere to all applicable laws and regulations in the conduct of joint venture operations. In addition, we have processes in place to identify and manage health, safety, and socio-economic risks (which may include human rights risk) in non-operated joint ventures.

3.3 Actions taken to assess effectiveness

As part of OIMS, we regularly undertake audits and reviews of various aspects of our business operations. The effectiveness of our business practices and compliance with all applicable laws (including those in relation to modern slavery) are in scope for these assessments. In addition, assessments are carried out of relevant third parties including those providing materials and services and contract labour.

The third party review and assessment program in 2020 was impacted by restrictions associated with COVID-19. Nevertheless, a number of staffing agencies that provide contract labour and a third party contractor providing waste management services in Papua New Guinea were assessed.

To establish a consistent understanding of our ethical standards, employees are required to confirm annually that they have read, and are in compliance with, the Standards of Business Conduct.

Through our Open Door Communication process, employees are encouraged to ask questions, voice concerns, and make appropriate suggestions regarding the business practices of the Reporting Entities. Employees are expected to report promptly to management suspected violations of law, policies, and internal controls, so that management can take appropriate corrective action. Depending on the subject matter of the question, concern, or suggestion, each employee has access to alternative channels of communication, for example, the Controller's Department; Internal Audit; the Human Resources Department; the Law Department; the Safety, Health and Environment Department; the Security Department; and the Treasurer's Department. Employees have access to processes that allow for questions, concerns and suggestions to be made without identifying themselves. We provide several confidential mechanisms for reporting, including a 24-hour phone number and a mailing address. A Hotline Steering Committee comprising Security, Audit, Law and Human Resources personnel reviews all reports of suspected violations.

In addition, our Whistleblower's Protection Policy is available at www.exxonmobil.com.au to ensure that individuals who report misconduct or disclose any improper state of affairs or circumstances can do so safely, securely and with confidence that they will be protected and supported.
