Our Policies

We have prepared and implemented an amendment to our Code of Business Conduct and Ethics ("the Code"), applicable to all employees within the Aspen group, including our Australian Branch, to state that Aspen takes a zero tolerance approach to slavery and human trafficking and is committed to ensuring that there is no slavery or human trafficking in our business or supply chains. This is reflective of the Code's general commitment to integrity in the conduct of our business and the requirement that all Aspen employees perform their duties in a manner, which is legally, ethically and morally irreproachable.

Other relevant policies, including our Group Outsourcing Policy and Group Procurement Policy, have also been reviewed and amended to highlight the need to consider slavery and human trafficking issues when selecting and engaging with suppliers.

We have a Whistleblowing Policy under which employees can report any issues or concerns they may have regarding slavery or human trafficking in our business or supply chains.

Employment

Our recruitment processes comply with UK and Australian employment legislation, and we ensure that 'right to work' document checks and contracts of employment are in place for both permanent and temporary employees.

Our Assessment

In 2018, we outsourced recruitment to a third party. Our agreement with this third party has full modern slavery provisions and the third party in turn has robust policies and procedures in place to counter slavery and human trafficking.

We have reviewed our spend data to assess the number of suppliers, their location and the nature of the goods or services being provided, in order to assess which suppliers represent the greatest risk to managing slavery and human trafficking in our supply chain. For those higher risk suppliers, we have reviewed their policies and statements to ascertain that they are ensuring compliance with the requirements of the Acts.

Our tender template includes a statement that Aspen is committed to ensuring slavery and human trafficking do not exist in our business or supply chains. Bidding suppliers are required to include their relevant policies and procedures as part of their tenders.

Our standard purchasing terms require that a supplier must comply with the provisions of the Acts in relation both to its direct employees and to its suppliers and ensure that neither it nor its supply chain makes use of slavery, forced or bonded labour or human trafficking.

In 2018, we signed global outsourcing agreements with two Indian-based suppliers for the provision of a range of back and middle office services, including IT. As suppliers to the Aspen group, their services also encompass our Australian Branch. The evaluation of the suppliers included a full assessment of their approach to modern slavery, as well as their ethical and social policies. This included a review of the organisations' United Nations report based on the Global Reporting Initiative, covering the organisations' approach to issues such as human rights practice, ethical supply chains and operating ethically. The agreements with the suppliers contain a range of clauses to prevent and detect modern slavery, for example, clauses covering the Acts, minimum wage obligations and extensive audit rights. We undertook several site visits to the organisations' delivery locations during the selection process and these visits have continued after signing of the agreements and subject to Covid-19 restrictions, will now continue to be carried out.

Through our Group Procurement team, we have a process in place to assess the situation of the supplier should we be notified, or become aware, that the supplier is in breach of the regulations by non-compliance with the requirements.

Any potential breach is deemed a serious allegation and will be immediately escalated to Senior Management and could potentially result in the contract for the Supplier being terminated.

Awareness and training

All Aspen employees have been made aware of the Acts, the changes to our policies and the commitments these represent. More in-depth training has been given to our Procurement team and to key spending departments. Ongoing training will be given to those departments where we believe there is a direct connection to the potential exposure to modern slavery and human trafficking in order that they are aware of what to look for and feel comfortable in reporting any such potential issues. All new employees to Aspen Australian Branch will be provided with a copy of this Statement as part of their “New Starter” package so that they are aware that Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking will not be tolerated within our operations.
