5. Identifying Modern Slavery Risks

Wood Mackenzie has undertaken a comprehensive analysis of its operations to identify, assess and address risks of modern slavery practices. This assessment is informed by an in-depth understanding on the nature and complexity of our business activities and the broader economic, social and political factors which influence our operations.

5.1 Operations

As a global research and consultancy business, we do not believe that we are at a significant risk of modern slavery within our workforce. Even so, as a proactive and preventative measure, we emphasise employee awareness and training as well as compliance with a number of global policies.

Global

Our workforce is primarily comprised of employees who work in professional, office-based role which we understand will reduce the level of risk that modern slavery (including forced or child labour) will occur. A small number of our colleagues are Field Engineers (<20 of 2,350). The overwhelming majority of our colleagues are university graduates or equivalent.

All Wood Mackenzie employees are provided with remuneration complying with minimum wage legislation and salaries are benchmarked based on industry best practice and specifics regarding individual roles. Whilst we comply with minimum wage legislation, Wood Mackenzie employs are generally paid above the local minimum wage.

Wood Mackenzie is also committed to supporting the wellness of all colleagues. Wood Mackenzie provides resources to eligible employees to care for their mental health and wellness, and to help ensure they stay healthy. Wood Mackenzie equips managers with the resources to appropriately support members of their team.

Australia

Whilst our Australian operations are regulated under robust labour laws, and Australia has a low prevalence of modern slavery according to the Global Slavery Index, we recognise that no jurisdiction is entirely immune to risks of modern slavery practices. We understand that there are higher-risk sectors including, for instance, cleaning and security services which can involve vulnerable worker populations including migrant and casual labourers.

5.2 Supply Chain

Wood Mackenzie has a presence across a number of jurisdictions with significant operations (e.g. over 100 staff) in the UK, United States of America, India, and Singapore. As well as this our operations in China, Mexico, Canada and Australia employ over 50 colleagues respectively.

Global

A large number of our first-tier suppliers globally rely on global supply chains for the provision of goods and/or services to Wood Mackenzie.

We recognise that where our suppliers are domiciled in countries where modern slavery is more prevalent, the inherent risk increases. Wood Mackenzie consistently takes steps to reduce that risk. From our analysis, the vast majority of our supply chain is based in either low or medium-risk countries (e.g. Western Europe, North America, and Australia).

Australia

As above, Wood Mackenzie considers the risk of modern slavery within first-tier suppliers domiciled in Australia to be low. We do continue to be vigilant in our approach to tackling modern slavery.

Identified risks within our supply chain:

- Any procurement spends occurring in countries with a high risk of modern slavery increases the likelihood of direct or indirect involvement in modern slavery.
- The possibility of adverse activity involving suppliers or sub-contractors further down the supply chain.
- Inadvertent exposure to exploitative labour practices e.g. in situations where we work from a serviced office or leased premise where facilities management, cleaning, reception and/or security services are arranged by the landlord. This may arise due to a lack of direct oversight or transparency in the employment conditions of workers engaged through third-party providers contracted by the property management.
- Globally, the following sectors from which we may procure supplier services where there is a higher risk of modern slavery practices:
 - Outsourced cleaning, receptionist and security services present risks of underpayment and poor working conditions.
 - Roles within food, beverage, travel, and hospitality services present risks of underpayment, excessive working hours, and exploitative working conditions, particularly among casual, seasonal, and migrant workers.
 - The production and sourcing of event merchandise and promotional materials present risks of exploitative labour practices, including low wages and unsafe working conditions, particularly in offshore manufacturing and supply chains.

6. Addressing Risks of Modern Slavery Practices

6.1 Operations

Wood Mackenzie maintains policies and procedures applicable to the Reporting Entities that help to ensure that its employees are working of their own free will. Examples of actions to minimise risks of modern slavery practices include:

- Policies and procedures to ensure passport and visa checks to confirm that individuals have the rights to work.
- All Wood Mackenzie employees must also provide a tax file or equivalent to verify employees are of the minimum working age applicable to the laws of their jurisdiction.
- All Wood Mackenzie employees must have the right to work in the jurisdiction they are working in.
- We operate a zero recruitment fees policy.

- We require all job descriptions to be transparent and published widely usually at least on our website, on LinkedIn and Glassdoor. All contracts of employment cover employment terms, working hours, working conditions and compensation.
- We operate a strict policy against Wood Mackenzie holding the documents of colleagues (e.g. passports, visas, or other identity documents).
- Our Code of Business Conduct and Ethics ("Code") explicitly prohibits modern slavery as does our Human Rights Policy. Our Code, Human Rights Policy & Global Modern Slavery Statement are based around principles outlined by the ILO. Employees, suppliers, or business partners that aid, abet or are complicit in acts of modern slavery may be subject to sanction, including termination of employment or contract. The Code encourages all parties to report incidents that may involve modern slavery directly to Wood Mackenzie or by utilising Wood Mackenzie's confidential Speak Up Platform. Wood Mackenzie colleagues are encouraged to raise any concerns with their direct line manager or their Human Resources Business Partner.
- Employees are required to prevent, detect, and report instances of modern slavery in any part of our business or supply chain.
- Our policy sets out the process for employees to report concerns, including suspected breaches of the Code. If an employee is unsure about whether a particular act, the treatment of workers more generally, or their working conditions constitutes any of the various forms of modern slavery, the Code requires that the employee escalate this information to their manager, Human Resources (HR), or through the anonymous Speak Up Platform. The Hotline includes reporting modern slavery, which takes into account forced and child labour, as a separate reporting category. To encourage reporting by employees and third parties, Wood Mackenzie has established systems that protect whistle-blowers from retaliation and detrimental treatment.
- Wood Mackenzie mandates annual compliance training for employees on numerous topics including modern slavery. Completion rates are monitored annually, and in 2025 at least 95% of employees successfully completed the assigned modern slavery training.
- Wood Mackenzie requires all employees to undertake an annual review and attestation of policies.
- All Wood Mackenzie workforce members, including contingent workers, are required to complete an online, interactive modern slavery training program as part of Wood Mackenzie's new hire onboarding process, and mandatory annual training curriculum.
- Wood Mackenzie has adopted a Human Rights Policy, approved by Wood Mackenzie's Global Executive Team, and will continue mandatory Modern Slavery training annually for all employees, contingent workers, and new hires.
- In addition to completing the Modern Slavery training, all employees, contingent workers, and new hires are required to sign a certification acknowledging that they have read and agree to abide by the Human Rights Policy and report any potential violations of the policy to Wood Mackenzie management or via the Speak Up Platform.
- We have mapped our operations against the Global Slavery Index ("GSI"). 47.17% of our colleagues are based in low-risk countries whilst 51% of our colleagues are based in medium-risk countries. Only 2.34% of our colleagues work in high-risk countries.
- Whilst only a very small percentage of our operational footprint is in high-risk countries according to the GSI, we acknowledge that our operations in those countries require additional focus and intend to prepare additional guidance for Office Leads in higher risk countries.

6.2 Supply Chain

All suppliers with whom Wood Mackenzie interact with are subject to the standards outlined in our Supplier Code of Conduct supported by our Human Rights Policy and our Statement on Modern Slavery. The Supplier Code of Conduct explicitly outlines that:

- Wood Mackenzie will not engage in business or relationships that make Wood Mackenzie complicit in human rights abuses.
- All employees of suppliers must be employed voluntarily and that Suppliers should not use any form of slave-forced-, bonded-, indentured-, or involuntary labour.
- Suppliers cannot engage in human trafficking or exploitation and shall not retain employees' identification such as passports or work permits as a condition of employment.
- Our expectations that suppliers conduct their activities in a manner that respects human rights and that suppliers shall uphold labour practices in relation to freedom of association; employment status; and comply with local minimum wages laws; are paid lawful wages and benefits (including overtime), without discrimination, and in accordance with applicable laws; and ensure that they are in compliance with health and safety laws and regulations in all areas where they have responsibility.
- Suppliers must attest annually acknowledging compliance with our Supplier Code of Conduct.
- Our Supplier Code of Conduct is explicit that Suppliers acknowledge their obligations to (a) communicate our expectations to all employees, contractors, sub-contractors, and third parties (b) ensure that employees are trained as required on the matters within the Supplier Code of Conduct including modern slavery and human trafficking.

We encourage our suppliers, and their employees, to contact Wood Mackenzie directly with concerns about incidents of modern slavery or use our anonymous Speak Up Platform.

Wood Mackenzie reserves the right to conduct announced and unannounced on-site audits of a supplier's facilities and conduct confidential worker interviews in conjunction with such audits. Wood Mackenzie will address all violations, pursuing the appropriate remedial action, including contract termination, depending on the circumstances of the violation and subject to the terms and conditions of the underlying contract and local law.

As part of our ongoing third-party risk mitigation program, we contract with a leading risk and compliance organization to determine whether our Tier 1 and High-Risk suppliers are subject to any modern slavery and human trafficking-related sanctions. The organization also scans content daily from news sources globally to identify instances where such suppliers may have been implicated in possible violations of laws or regulations, including modern slavery or other human rights abuses.

Analysing our 2025 spend under 0.6% of our global spend was in the 20 countries with the highest prevalence of modern slavery according to the Global Slavery Index. The overwhelming majority of spend in those countries was at international hotel chains, air travel, office rentals etc.

7. Assessing the Effectiveness of Our Actions

Wood Mackenzie's employees and third parties (such as suppliers) are encouraged to report incidents of modern slavery to the Speak Up Platform. The Speak Up Platform is accessible 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. None of the Reporting Entities have identified any instance of modern slavery in their operations, or in our supply chain, or of vulnerable families that experienced loss of income as a result of steps taken to eliminate modern slavery in any of its forms.

Our Modern Slavery Working Group, comprised of key stakeholders across Wood Mackenzie, including our General Counsel, shares modern slavery risk guidance with accountable departments. The Group also develops policies and codes, supports the review of human rights and anti-modern slavery controls and processes, and ensures high-quality annual training and monitoring compliance with said training.

Other activities include:

- We have mapped our operations against the Global Slavery Index. 47.17% of our colleagues are based in low-risk countries whilst 51% of our colleagues are based in medium-risk countries. Only 2.34% of our colleagues work in high-risk countries. The overwhelming majority of our Supply Chain spend is within low and medium risk countries (>90% of global spend).
- Evaluating the scope of suppliers for which we will conduct modern slavery assessments and making any necessary adjustments to provide adequate supplier coverage.
- Reviewing the methodologies we use to assess the risk of modern slavery (e.g. questionnaires and screening tools) and validating their effectiveness.
- Continuing to keep up to date on best practice to ensure our policies are effective as possible.
- Continuing to capture and track trends in indicative key data metrics such as percentage of employees that have completed Annual Compliance Training and taking remedial action where necessary.
- Our Procurement Team is additionally working towards defining the management information (KRI/KPIs) of our suppliers to report on data gathered through our assessments (e.g. percentage of suppliers performing services in geographies with higher risk of modern slavery, including forced and child labour).
- We are in the process of establishing regular audits and risk assessments to monitor and address modern slavery risks with our operations and supply chain.

Key metrics

- In 2025, we received zero reports of Modern Slavery via our Speak Up Platform globally from colleagues or those within our supply chain.
- In 2025, 97%+ of colleagues completed our Annual Compliance Training. The majority of those who were non-compliant were in the process of working their notice.
- In 2025, no exit interviews highlighted concerns relating to Modern Slavery across Wood Mackenzie.
