The Code of Business Conduct applies to all Expeditors employees and service providers.

Supply Chains

As a non-asset based logistics service provider, Expeditors Australia subcontracts our air, ocean, and surface transportation services to airlines, steamship lines, and trucking companies that physically transport cargo. Other service providers of Expeditors Australia include warehouse operators, contingent worker service providers, and customs brokerage agencies. Expeditors Australia also engages other non-logistics service providers for security services and cleaning services.

The majority of our service providers are based in Australia. However, as part of the larger Expeditors group, some of our transportation related service providers may be located anywhere across the Expeditors global network.

Risk of Modern Slavery Practices

Expeditors Australia subcontracts part of our transportation, warehouse, and customs brokerage-related services to third party service providers. We have identified these outsourced operations as susceptible to higher risk of modern slavery as we do not have direct line of sight of these operations and the individuals performing these services.

We mitigate these risks by having a dedicated supplier management team and a well-established supplier management program, which includes periodic on-site audits and reviews of our service providers. All Expeditors personnel conducting audits and reviews are trained to identify red flags and potential violations of labor laws, including modern slavery.

During the year 2020, on-site audits and reviews of existing service providers were suspended due to the Covid-19 pandemic and related health and safety concerns. Limited in-person audits were resumed for a brief period in year 2021, but were suspended again after a surge in the number of Covid-19 cases in Australia as a result of the Omicron variant. In the meantime, we continued to monitor our service providers by conducting audits and reviews virtually.

The above suspension did not affect new service providers. On-site audits and reviews continue to be a prerequisite to the provision of services to Expeditors, as part of our stringent on-boarding process.

Due Diligence and Remediation Processes

We manage the risk of modern slavery in our supply chain by maintaining consistent and high standards of due diligence and risk mitigation processes to monitor for and avoid modern slavery in all environments in which we operate in, regardless of whether the environment or the suppliers with whom we work are more or less vulnerable to modern slavery.

Approved transportation, warehouse, and customs brokerage-related service providers are required to certify their compliance with all applicable laws, regulations, and our Code of Business Conduct. These providers are also subject to a risk-based due diligence process as part of the determination regarding whether they are eligible to enter into a commercial relationship with Expeditors. Once such a third-party service provider is approved, they are subject to continued monitoring and re-certification. As at the date of this statement, 95% of Expeditors' transactions with transportation, warehouse, and customs brokerage service providers are handled by service providers who had signed a compliance certification.

As part of our contracting process, we include prohibitions against the use of forced, compulsory or trafficked labor, and we expect that our suppliers will hold their own suppliers to the same high standards.

To ensure a high level of understanding of the risks of modern slavery in our supply chains and our business, we provide mandatory anti-human trafficking training to all our employees. As at the date of this statement, 100% of Expeditors Australia's employees have completed the anti-human trafficking training at least once. This training is repeated on an annual basis.

Expeditors also provides a helpline, operated by an independent service provider, that enables anyone to report anonymously any known or suspected modern slavery practices. Employees, directors, and officers of Expeditors Australia and third parties acting on behalf of Expeditors Australia are encouraged to report any known or suspected violation of our Code of Business Conduct, including any abuse of applicable labor standards and, specifically, any suspected instance of forced, bonded, or compulsory labor or employment of workers below the minimum legal age of employment. All reported violations are investigated and dealt with in accordance with Expeditors' global policies.

Effectiveness in Combating Modern Slavery

We continue to assess the effectiveness of our efforts to eradicate modern slavery within our organization by doing the following:

- monitoring our service providers and our branches through audits and incident reporting;
- considering trends of grievances and complaints received through our anonymous helpline; and
- encouraging our employees to provide feedback and suggestions through our Open Door Policy.

Consultation with other Entities

Expeditors Australia does not own or control any other entities. Accordingly, the process of consultation referred to in Section 16(1)(f) of the Act does not apply.

Plans for the Next Reporting Year

Over the next year, Expeditors Australia will continue to focus on the resumption of on-site audits for more services providers to the extent permitted by local regulations and having regard to the health and safety of our employees and our service providers.

This statement was approved by our Board on 16 June, 2022.
