Our supply chain

Our supply chains include over 500 suppliers to source a wide range of fasteners, fixings and industrial supplies. The largest category of supplier spend during the reporting period was on our national suppliers as we strive to source locally whenever possible.

Examples of our products sourced include fasteners and fixings, abrasives, cutting & drilling, sealants, adhesives, lubricants, hand tools, safety, construction chemicals, materials handling, petrochemical, special manufacture, and packaging supplies.

Examples of services procured include freight/courier, waste service providers, building maintenance and office cleaning services.

A small fraction of products used by our entities are sourced from overseas. In the main, United Fasteners source 90% of goods and services nationally and 10% internationally from the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Japan, China, India, Taiwan, South Korea, and Vietnam.

Supply chain map

Risks of modern slavery practices in the operations & supply chains of the reporting entity (and any entities it owns or controls).

Given the highly regulated nature of the market in Australia for our organisation's size, the risk of modern slavery employment within United Fasteners is considered to be low. Modern slavery risk is mitigated through our compliance with national wage laws closely managed by our dedicated HR manager, the adherence to industrial policies and procedures, and the provision of grievance mechanisms for all employees to safely raise concerns.

There is a variable degree of modern slavery risk throughout our supply chains, and we acknowledge that risks associated with the procurement of goods and services exist in our supply chain.

We recognise the risk associated with national and international suppliers operating and sourcing from countries with a high prevalence of modern slavery, such as China and India. The countries are at risk of forced labour, particularly at risk for state-imposed forced labour and when workers are provided with accommodation. The traceability of the global supply chain is a shared concern. Within our national supply chain, we have also identified that our local cleaning and maintenance service suppliers and our local couriers with sub-contractors pose the highest exposure to modern slavery.

The following risks have been identified that could potentially 'cause' modern slavery practices:

- directly engaging foreign workers, or unskilled, or temporary or seasonal labour to work in warehousing, and
- using recruitment agencies.

The following risks have been identified that could potentially 'contribute' modern slavery practices:

- obtaining cheaper supplies through competitive procurement, and
- setting unrealistic delivery time frames to suppliers.

The following risks have been identified that could potentially be 'directly linked to' modern slavery practices:

- sourcing products from national and international suppliers that have operations or directly source from countries that have a high prevalence of modern slavery, such as China and India,
- sourcing products which may have been manufactured by another entity that have sourced minerals, such as rubber, cobalt, zinc, copper, manganese, and nickel by another entity using forced labour,
- informally engaging local service providers for cleaning and maintenance services, and;
- engaging local courier suppliers that may be using subcontractors that are foreign workers, or unskilled, or temporary or seasonal labour.

Actions taken by the reporting entity (and any entities it owns or controls) to assess and address these risks, including due diligence and remediation processes.

United Fasteners employs staff in accordance with the laws of Australia and the laws of each State in which we operate. United Fasteners strives to achieve best practice and regularly consults with our supply chain, along with regular site visits both in Australia and overseas.

We have identified potential risks based on the geography, industry, and product and services for our top Australian-based suppliers, international suppliers by spend, and perceived high-risk suppliers. We have engaged our key national and international suppliers and service providers through a Modern Slavery Questionnaire to help us understand the risk of modern slavery in our supply chains. We have also identified preliminary modern slavery risks in our supply chains, referring to the Social Hotspot Database and Global Slavery Index.

A Modern Slavery Policy has been introduced to complement our existing Health and Safety Policy, Environment Policy, Ethical Sourcing Policy, Traditional Custodians of the Land and Indigenous Policy. The policy outlines our commitment, responsibility, and actions to prevent, detect and report on modern slavery in our operations and supply chains and will be regularly reviewed and updated as required. Communication, awareness, and training are an integral part of the policy development. We integrate our Modern Slavery Policy into our induction process and training procedures for all employees.

United Fasteners is not aware of any incidents of modern slavery in its operations or supply chains throughout the reporting period. If any issues are identified, we will conduct an investigation, and determine remediation actions. Our grievance mechanisms, alongside our internal policies and reporting structures, require employees to raise concerns and notify management about any issue or suspicion of modern slavery in our operations or supply chains.

How the reporting entity assesses the effectiveness of these actions.

To assess the effectiveness of actions taken, we will communicate, train, and raise awareness about modern slavery among all our employees. We will continue engaging directly with suppliers with the modern slavery questionnaire, to gain a proper understanding of their measures in place and work to ensure that modern slavery is not occurring within their own businesses, review their progress and monitor actions. This includes reviewing the appropriateness of modern slavery questions and engagement with suppliers. We will also identify and determine the processes to operationalise our Modern Slavery Policy and questionnaire in our procurement process.

United Fasteners will also review modern slavery risks and remediation actions in our operations and supply chains annually; this includes an annual management review of our response to modern slavery.

Addressing the risk of modern slavery is complex, therefore United Fasteners is committed to continuous improvement so that our processes and interventions remain effective in preventing and remediating modern slavery in our operations and supply chains.

Process of consultation with any entities the reporting entity owns or controls.

In preparing this statement, United Fasteners has engaged relevant management across our business to identify modern slavery risks in our operations and supply chains as appropriate.

This modern slavery statement was approved by the board of United Fasteners Australia Pty Ltd on 1st July 2025.
