Risks of modern slavery in operations and supply chains

QMetco operations are carried out entirely within Australia and all employees are engaged on terms and conditions which comply with Australian laws and are free to join and be represented by unions.

Most procurement items are sourced from suppliers which are Australian based or have operations within Australia and operate under Australian laws. For the most part, these organisations have sophisticated supply chain policies and procedures in place.

However, some organisations tend to have long supply chains in multiple countries, and we acknowledge that modern slavery risks can be present further down these supply chains. We expect increasing visibility into the actions taken by these suppliers as they move to report in accordance with the requirements of the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cwth).

QMetco undertook targeted risk assessments of modern slavery risks in our operations and supply chain over the current and previous reporting periods to consider the risks that we are causing, contributing, or directly linked to modern slavery practices. Following this assessment, areas of vulnerability in our operations were found to include offshore manufacturing, and subcontract arrangements in relation to cleaning. From this process, QMetco obtained satisfactory responses from the suppliers of these products and services in the form of modern slavery statements and/or policy documents. QMetco also performed a review of our twenty highest suppliers by value of services. Further information on the actions taken is included at point 4 in the next section.

QMetco supports local businesses and contractors within regional communities for minor procurement of goods and services, which operate under Australian laws and may not have extensive supply chains procedures.

Actions taken by QMetco during the reporting period.

QMetco is committed to operating ethically and legally, partnering with suppliers that are aligned to the values of the company and adhere to the terms of the company's commercial agreements.

The following actions were actions undertaken by QMetco during the reporting period:

1. The QMetco Board approved a Modern Slavery Statement and 2023 report that outlines the company's commitment to addressing modern slavery, expectations of suppliers, employees and business partners and procedures for reporting instances of modern slavery.
2. All new Directors and Senior Leaders, including key procurement personnel undertake on-line Modern Slavery awareness and education.

3. QMetco and FoxMan Risk Committees have Modern Slavery as a standing agenda item.
4. A review of suppliers was completed to determine the twenty highest suppliers by value of service provided. A review was then performed to determine whether these suppliers had a Modern Slavery Statement in place and publicly accessible. The intent of this review was to identify whether Modern Slavery was an issue with material suppliers. One supplier could not provide a Modern Slavery Statement, they are no longer engaged by Foxleigh.

Measuring Effectiveness

QMetco will measure effectiveness through:

- Presence of the modern slavery risk as a standing item on Risk Committee agendas
- Monitoring key and large suppliers' implementation of Modern Slavery Statements.
- Continue promotion of a greater level of awareness within our business of the nature and risks of modern slavery.

Consultation with subsidiaries and JV partners

While the Foxleigh JV is not a reporting entity, QMetco, through FoxMan with JV partner support, has added Modern Slavery as a standing agenda item for JV Management Committee meetings and there is a commitment to share statements and actions to promote awareness and learning.

Approval of Statement and Report

This Statement and Report has been authorised and approved by the QMetco Board which is the principal governing body for the reporting entity named in this statement for the purposes of the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cwth).
