About AVJennings Pty Limited

AVJennings Pty Limited (“AVJennings”) is a leading residential property development company with a name that continues to be one of the most recognised housing brands in Australia.

The business has been part of the Australian residential property landscape for over 90 years. It was founded in Melbourne in 1932 by Sir Albert Victor Jennings. Sir Albert believed in the “Australian dream” of a better life through home ownership, and he helped make it a reality for thousands of people. He built communities – something AVJennings continues to do today, driven by our belief that “Housing Matters. Community Matters”. We create communities people want to belong to and grow with. AVJennings remains one of the most recognised and trusted names in quality, affordable housing in Australia.

Our Structure, Operations and Business

AVJennings has major residential development projects in four Australian States, namely Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia. The Company also has equity investments in some apartment and land subdivision projects in Perth, Western Australia. It has one project in Orewa, north of Auckland in New Zealand. Further details about AVJennings and its activities can be found on the Company’s website, www.avjennings.com.au.

The AVJennings Group comprises forty-three subsidiaries, some of which are special purpose vehicles with direct land holdings. Others are parties to joint ventures, licence holders or holding companies of other subsidiaries.

As part of its business operations, the Company engages contractors in the development and construction industries, which include large civil and building contractors. It also utilises the services of product suppliers (eg. building materials, white goods, uniforms etc), services suppliers (lawyers, planning consultants, engineers, architects and others) as well as trade suppliers (bricklayers, plumbers, electricians, carpenters, landscapers and other trades). In FY25 AVJennings procured approximately $93.17 million of goods and services from its top 50 suppliers.

AVJennings Risk Oversight & Governance Framework (FY2025)

AVJennings' Board has responsibility for ensuring the Company has strong risk management, internal compliance and control systems to monitor and manage financial and non-financial risks. It oversees the establishment and implementation of a sound risk management system and periodically reviews its effectiveness.

The Risk Committee assists the Board in setting risk strategies, policies, frameworks, models and procedures, and oversees implementation of the risk management framework. This oversight includes a wide range of matters related to financial and non-financial risk, including the monitoring of employee and contractor health, safety and human rights related risks and those concerning modern slavery. In FY2025, the Risk Committee continued its oversight of initiatives implemented by senior management both from a safety and operations perspective.

The Company has in place the following internal policies that apply to directors, employees and contractors.

- A Code of Conduct which applies to all levels of management and staff
- A Whistleblower Policy
- An Equal Opportunity Policy
- A Discrimination and Harassment Prevention Policy
- A Fraud and Corruption Prevention Policy and
- A Modern Slavery Policy
- A Supplier Code of Conduct

The Supplier Code of Conduct sets out AVJennings' commitment to ethical, sustainable and socially responsible procurement and our expectations of our suppliers in the areas of:

1. Labour and Human Rights
2. Workplace Health and Safety
3. Governance
4. Ethical Behaviour and Conflicts of Interest and
5. Environmental Sustainability.

The Code has been communicated to AVJennings' top suppliers, who were requested to formally acknowledge that they have read, understood and will comply with the Code.

Risk Identification

Virtually all of AVJennings' suppliers are Australian or New Zealand based. As part of further due diligence to ascertain if AVJennings is contributing to or being indirectly linked with modern slavery related practices within its supply chains, the Company undertook a risk assessment of suppliers with whom it conducted business over a certain value in FY25. Approximately 20 of these larger suppliers were those not previously engaged by the Company on Modern Slavery related practices. They were directly engaged on supply chain and human rights related issues, with the Company conveying its Supplier Code of Conduct to each of them as part of its enquiries. Government and local government authorities were not included in the supplier assessment on the basis that their risk profile was considered to be at the very low end of the spectrum. The suppliers were grouped into categories based on goods and services provided, on the share of spend in each category and on the risk profile of each category.

The assessment of suppliers was in the form of a questionnaire, with specific questions seeking information on their supply chains (including country of origin of goods imported), their employment practices and the employment practices of their suppliers.

Group	Share of Spend	Risk Profile
Apartment Construction (3 projects)*	20.52%	High risk/low spend
Civil Contractors	35.25%	Medium spend/low risk
Professional Services	11.94%	Low- spend/low risk
Trade Subcontractors	18.11%	Low spend/low-medium risk
Materials Suppliers	14.18%	Low spend/high risk

In FY25, apartment construction at Waterline Place in Williamstown Vic and Brunswick, Vic was completed, with work progressing at Kogarah NSW during the year.*

Whilst AVJennings' materials and trades suppliers are primarily Australia or New Zealand based, the assessment revealed that:

- Some brick, steel, hardware and white goods suppliers were part of larger organisations with modern slavery reporting requirements that had conducted extensive due diligence on their supply chains to determine risk and remedial actions required.
- Some timber suppliers and landscape contractors source a major proportion of their products locally (within Australia).
- Suppliers with Modern Slavery Act reporting obligations have made considerable progress towards putting in place policies and procedures to analyse and mitigate associated risks within their supply chains, have a human rights policy (or similar), train employees with direct responsibility for supply chain management on risks associated with modern slavery and actively monitor compliance, including remediation where necessary;
- Some suppliers have no reporting obligations, however they (particularly a number of civil contractors and consultants) have voluntarily put in place supplier induction processes, ethical procurement, corporate social responsibility policies and procedures that also address modern slavery risks.
- No suppliers have operations in countries with a high prevalence of modern slavery practices;
- Some service and trade suppliers with small to medium sized operations and not subject to reporting obligations under the Modern Slavery Act (typically with less than 20 employees) do not have formal grievance procedures or mechanisms for employees to raise concerns regarding labour conditions but operate on a more informal basis where employees can directly address these issues with their employer.
- Generally, of responses received from suppliers, we found that there is now much more awareness and suppliers are either formally or informally implementing processes to ensure there are no modern slavery associated risks within their operations.
- Almost all suppliers had suitable employment contracts in place for their employees and did not suspect modern slavery practices, including child labour, within their recruitment systems.
- A small number of suppliers use labour hire workers and use trusted and registered labour hire agencies in Australia.

Our materials suppliers have their own complex and diverse supply chains that can extend beyond Australian borders. This extended supply chain - particularly in high-risk geographies with poor working conditions where modern slavery legislation is inadequate or does not apply to the supplier, or they have no obligation to carry out necessary checks, is where the risks of such practices may be present.

The assessment of AVJennings' professional service providers, who are all based in either Australia or , New Zealand and include lawyers, accountants, engineers, planning consultants, architects and similar professionals, established that the risk of modern slavery related practices within their operations is low.

Ongoing Consultation and Communication

AVJennings maintains long-term relationships with a number of its large civil contractors, consultants, trades and material suppliers and these relationships are based on mutual trust and delivery of high-quality services. Whilst our enquiries have revealed that there is no immediate cause for concern, we will continue to engage with suppliers that have no reporting requirements to encourage risk assessment, improve awareness and assist with compliance.

AVJennings has also previously undertaken company-wide communication with its procurements and site-based staff, to educate them on the risks and impacts of modern slavery and the channels available to report suspected practices.

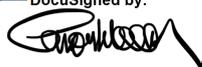

Due Diligence and Remediation

AVJennings, now part of AVID Property Group, will continue to work with parties throughout its supply chains to prevent any contribution it may have to the issue of modern slavery. This will be achieved by continuing to raise awareness, monitoring and improvement of due diligence processes to assist in the identification of risks. As part of its continuous improvement process, the following will be undertaken:

- A roll out of a Supplier Code of Conduct to all material suppliers as part of the supplier on-boarding process.
- Engage further with suppliers that have indicated they do not plan to continue with assessment of modern slavery risks within their businesses.
- Continue ongoing training of employees engaged in procurement and development activities on site.
- Encouraging site sub-contractor interactions with AVJennings/AVID employed supervisors to enable ongoing risk assessment and management.
- Provide a mechanism for employees and external stakeholders to report concerns anonymously or otherwise using the whistle-blower channel.

Risk management, governance and operations of the AVJennings Group were overseen by the Board of Directors of AVJennings Limited throughout FY2025. None of AVJennings' subsidiaries operated as separate businesses in FY2025 and the boards of directors of all the subsidiaries were constituted of the CEO and the Senior Executive team. There is therefore no need for formal consultation between group companies.
