Overview

Ashurst is a leading global law firm advising the world's largest companies, financial institutions and governments. In addition, in some jurisdictions we offer a range of adjacent professional services including board advisory, risk advisory and limited trust and company service provision. We operate from 28 offices, in 11 time zones and across 16 countries, advising a broad range of industry sectors including Digital Economy, Energy & Resources, Banks & Private Capital, Infrastructure and Real Estate. With a focus on quality, collaboration and a progressive culture we deliver a distinctive service to our clients that sets us apart from other law firms.

We wholeheartedly support the Modern Slavery Act 2015 (UK), and the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth) (Aust), whose provisions assist in the eradication of modern slavery, wherever it may occur, and raise public awareness of the issue. In addition to working to prevent modern slavery in our own supply chains, Ashurst's Social Impact Team is also working with a range of partners to support a wide range of initiatives to eradicate all forms of modern slavery around the world.

Our approach

We are committed to achieving the highest standards of ethical behaviour in the conduct of our business and activities worldwide. We support and respect the protection of internationally proclaimed human rights and endeavour to make sure that Ashurst is not complicit in human rights abuses. To this end, we will not tolerate slavery or human trafficking or abusive or unfair treatment in any part of our own business, or in any of our supply chains. We are generally, and in particular through our policies and practices in relation to procurement, human resources and corporate responsibility, committed to taking steps to ensure that slavery and human trafficking play no part in our own business or in our supply chains.

Our operations and supply chain

The sector within which we operate is generally assessed as being at low risk of modern slavery situations being present within it. We operate predominantly in countries which have been assessed, by the Global Slavery Index, as having a lower prevalence of modern slavery, together with active government responses to dealing with the issues. Our supply chains consist primarily of the provision of low risk professional support services or office facilities, which support our partners, lawyers and staff in their work. Its key components supply us with:

- Real estate: the offices we work from;
- Technology: such as the IT hardware and software and print services that support our business;
- Business services: the products that we buy into in our offices, for example furniture, stationery and marketing items as well as the services that we use in our offices such as catering, security and cleaning;
- Travel services: organising and booking our travel and accommodation requirements; and
- Professional services: such as external training services, external consultants and contractors and legal support services.

Policies and Procedures

We have a zero tolerance approach towards modern slavery and all forms of discriminatory or exploitative behaviour and treatment, whether within either our own business or that of those who supply us; this stance is made very clear in all our policies and behaviours. The most relevant of the policies and procedures that we have in place, and the steps that we have taken to mitigate against any risks of modern slavery, are set out below:

- Our Code of Conduct which sets out the conduct that we expect of our firm, employees, contractors and suppliers, and explicitly states that we will not tolerate slavery or human trafficking;
- Our Global Social Impact Responsibility Policy which, among other things, sets out our policy and approach on anti-slavery and human trafficking;
- Our Global Procurement Policy and Guidelines which aims to ensure that all goods and services acquired on behalf of the firm are acquired in line with procurement best practice, on the most advantageous commercial terms, at the lowest risk profile and with proper consideration of the social, environmental and ethical impacts of such activity;
- Our Global Contracts Protocol which aims to manage the firm's contractual risks by ensuring that appropriate due diligence is undertaken before entering into contracts. Due diligence requirements include a specific requirement to carry out due diligence in relation to slavery and enforced labour with all potential new vendors to Ashurst; and
- Our Global Whistleblowing Protection Policy that allows staff to raise any concerns that they may have about any individuals or organisations that Ashurst interacts with, whether they be clients, suppliers, or others.

Procurement and supplier due diligence

Recognising that the greatest risk of modern slavery is in our supply chains, we continue to take steps to ensure that those are both regulated and reviewed.

- We continue to refresh our risk assessment for suppliers, both for direct and indirect suppliers through our extended supply chain. In 2019/20 this review specifically took into account the requirements under the Australian legislation. We sampled a number of Australian suppliers who represented key relationships in higher risk areas to assess their progress in meeting the new legal obligations as part of our risk assessment review. No remedial actions were required as a result of this survey.
- Our supplier contract terms include undertakings that suppliers comply with all applicable laws, regulations, and codes of conduct and in an ethically compliant manner including with our standard business practices terms. These terms cover, amongst other things, labour and workplace management and touch on matters such as child, forced and involuntary labour; fair pay and working conditions; and training, learning and development opportunities.
- New suppliers. Ashurst's Global Procurement Policy mandates that a thorough due diligence process is carried out on key new suppliers. Accordingly, our standard bid invitation documentation asks key suppliers to demonstrate the steps they take to avoid or eliminate slavery and human trafficking from their supply chain. The disclosure of any slavery or human trafficking issue would mean a prospective supplier would be immediately disqualified from the procurement process. This has not happened as yet.
- Existing suppliers. Ashurst participates in a supplier information portal, which facilitates timely exchange of up-to-date information on aspects of certain suppliers' operations, including modern slavery and social impact responsibility practices and procedures. This enables us to target key suppliers and review their information to ensure it aligns with Ashurst's approach to mitigating modern slavery risks.
- Ashurst has an internal audit programme which covers a range of business risk areas. Updated processes for procurement and prevention of modern slavery will be included in the audit programme at appropriate intervals to assess the effectiveness of those processes.

Training of Staff

In previous years we have focused our training on staff involved in procurement of significant contracts. This year we have re-developed the training to extend to all personnel across the global group, recognising the important role that all personnel can play in reducing the risk of modern slavery both in the activities of the firm and in their personal choices. Our training stresses, amongst other things, Ashurst's zero tolerance stance on slavery and human trafficking and reinforcing the policies and procedures we have in place. This new training will be rolled out in September 2020.

Recruitment and welfare of our people

We are a leading law firm with more than 3,000 employees, partners and contractors working across Asia, Australia, Europe, the Middle East and North America. As a professional services firm, people are our most valuable asset at all levels of the business.

As part of our HR policies and procedures, we only use reputable recruitment firms and comply with all relevant local laws and regulations. We regularly review our global recruitment procedures and providers, as well as our arrangements for employee and contractors welfare by championing mental and physical wellbeing. All employees are paid at least the minimum wage in the local jurisdiction and in London employees and contractors are paid the London Living Wage or above.
