3. Risks of modern slavery practices

As a national service provider, Precise Air Group will continue to consciously consider how our activities and our supply chains could be linked to modern slavery practices.

Our employees

Our direct workforce is predominantly made up of qualified and skilled employees and we consider the risks of modern slavery to be negligible.

We are governed by employment legislation and all employees must comply with our employee handbook, which reinforces our expectations around ethics and integrity and makes clear that we oppose all forms of discrimination and victimisation.

Employees are inducted to the Precise Air Group using an online induction program which references Modern Slavery Act obligations.

Our subcontractors

We consider our subcontractor labour risk to be very low as we deal with Australian listed and private sector companies who engage locally based employees. We have a strict prequalification process through our contractor management system prior to engagement and we are confident that they adhere to the Australian employment legislation and the relevant award conditions. This platform is constantly reviewed and monitored to ensure strict compliance with our own internal compliance requirements along with external legislative responsibilities of the company.

Our suppliers

We continue to review and analyse the modern slavery risk associated with our suppliers.

Some of the possible risks remain constant in this process which are identified in our operations and supply chains are:

- Geographical traceability of the product and equipment supply chain, where we are working with retailers, wholesalers and distributors with a varying network of suppliers. Precise Air Group relies on accessibility and accuracy of information and our suppliers commit to adhering to the Modern Slavery Act.
- Working with our internal service providers in industries and geographical locations that may employ workers under employment terms that do not align with reasonable minimum or fair standards of pay. For example, IT support, corporate cleaning services, etc.

4. Measurable results to mitigate modern slavery risks

During this reporting year, we continued to focus on our highest value product and equipment suppliers to ensure that we are accessing information which confirms that they are aware of their obligations in respect of Modern Slavery and ensuring their company values align with the values of Precise Air Group.

The practices that we have in place that help us to enforce the standards set to prevent the risk of Modern Slavery and encourage the disclosure of any such practices within our business and throughout our supply chains are:

1. Ensuring employee's ongoing awareness of the Company's obligations in respect to Modern Slavery
2. Conduct an annual review code of conduct and all other employment and engagement policies to ensure Modern Slavery risks are mitigated
3. An annual roll out of the Code of Conduct

Since 2020, the Company has introduced:

- An updated Code of Conduct
- Precise Air Group's Modern Slavery Statement
- A review of the Whistleblowing platform and its relevance to reporting Modern Slavery risks.

For our next reporting year, our aim is to focus on enforcing the following practices and behaviours:

- The introduction of a Human Rights Policy
- Review of the employee onboarding program that includes mitigation of Modern Slavery risks
- Compliance training to occur for 100% of employees in line with our annual compliance training schedule, which includes a training module on mitigation of Modern Slavery risks

5. Measuring the effectiveness of these actions

For the next reporting year, we will continue to use key performance indicators to measure how effective we've been in combating slavery and human trafficking in our business and supply chains.

The KPI's we will be using in the next reporting year to measure our success are:

- 100% of employees will have received and reviewed the Human Rights Policy
- Review and implementation of any recommendations arising from the complete review of the employee electronic onboarding training program, with specific regard to Modern Slavery risks
- 100% of employees have received and completed the compliance training program issued in line with our annual compliance training schedule, which contains a module on mitigation of Modern Slavery risks
- 75% of the subcontractors targeted respond with a copy of their Modern Slavery statement or declaration
- 60% of suppliers targeted respond with a copy of their Modern Slavery statement or declaration

In reviewing our due diligence checks for our subcontractors and suppliers, in the event it is discovered that we contribute to modern slavery practices, we will consider ceasing the use of the subcontractor or suppliers.

6. Conclusion

In keeping with our commitment to act with integrity in all of our business operations, Precise Air Group continues to take an active role in working towards a position of no slavery and to support human rights.
