As Tokio Marine Group operates mainly in insurance and insurance related businesses, we normally do not act as a producer, manufacturer or retailer of physical goods.

Although TMNF operates in the corporate sector, risks do exist which TMNF and Tokio Marine Group are mindful of. These can arise from the following: sourcing of labour, supplier agreements, representation of the company by employees and inadequate internal policies.

Policies

Tokio Marine Group has adopted the Group Corporate Philosophy which includes the commitment that "Acting as a good corporate citizen through fair and responsible management, Tokio Marine Group will broadly contribute to the development of society".

Due diligence processes

Assessing our risks

In insurance underwriting, we have identified specific industries and businesses with high human rights risks based on international norms regarding human rights, external information, and industry trends. For these industries and businesses, we determine whether or not to underwrite them based on internal policies and procedures, taking into consideration human rights and modern slavery risks.

Addressing our risks

The parent company TMHD regularly carries out monitoring of initiatives for compliance and risk management in the business operations of Group companies including TMNF.

Specifically, based on "Tokio Marine Group Basic Policy on Personnel", Tokio Marine Group requires TMHD and Tokio Marine Group companies* to (1) formulate and thoroughly implement policies, (2) improve organisational structure, (3) implement training, (4) formulate and implement policies for fair recruitment selection, and (5) formulate harassment prevention regulations in the workplace and establish a consultation desk, etc. We also require them to report on these achievements.

TMNF also formulates a "Basic Policy on Human Rights Awareness" every year and checks the status of each department's efforts at the end of each fiscal year. As regards TMNF subsidiaries, we request them to submit a check sheet to confirm the implementation status of human rights awareness training every six months.

Through these efforts, TMNF confirms its Group companies' efforts of "respect for free will and freedom of retirement", "calculation and payment of fair wages", "prohibition of discrimination and harassment", "provision of disciplinary grounds in work regulations" and "monitoring of long working hours", etc. to reduce human rights risks that may be related to modern slavery by complying with laws and regulations.

There may be cases where it is not appropriate to report a possible compliance problem including modern slavery through a usual reporting channel set up within the organisation. To prepare for such cases, Tokio Marine Group operates internal and external hotlines (whistleblower contact points) to receive reports and inquiries from directors, officers and employees of Group companies. We clearly specify in our regulations that we will never allow persons making such reports or inquiries and those cooperating in investigations to be exposed to negative consequences because of their actions and keep details of reports and inquiries strictly confidential.

Furthermore, concerning our business partners, to implement social responsibility initiatives and integrate them into the value chain, TMNF issues the Principle of Transactions to new business partners including suppliers and subcontractors (and excluding insurance agents) whose transaction amount is equal to or greater than one million Japanese Yen. It requires these business partners to promote initiatives for “compliance with laws, regulations and social norms”, “promoting fair and honest transactions”, “thorough information management”, “consideration for the environment”, and “strengthening a relationship of trust”.

* Tokio Marine Group companies refers to the companies specified in the “Basic Policy for the Management of Group Companies.”

Assessing the effectiveness of our actions

In the event that an employee, a director or an officer discovers an issue or potential issue in relation to compliance, Tokio Marine Group requires such person to immediately report and consult on the issue through organisational channels based on the “Tokio Marine Group Compliance Standards”. However, to prepare for cases where it is not appropriate for employees or directors and officers to report or consult through organisational channels, the Group has installed in-house and external whistle-blowing channels (hotlines), which are staffed by internal and external specialists. The department in charge summarises the tendency and number of reports sent to the counter and utilises the information to improve efforts on human rights and labour practices.

In addition, Tokio Marine Group regularly conducts employee engagement surveys and monitors employee satisfaction with the environment of respect for human rights in the workplace.

At TMNF, a dedicated department (Human Rights Awareness and Diversity Promotion Division, Human Resources Department) formulates Basic Policies and Measures Concerning Human Rights every year and implements measures across all departments, evaluates the effectiveness of them and instructs on required remediation actions for areas of improvement.

Training

Tokio Marine Group companies conduct Human Rights training as part of various training programmes including the programmes for new recruits and e-learning and regular programmes in the workplace, in which all employees and other co-workers take part to build a vibrant corporate culture without slavery, human trafficking, discrimination and/or harassment. TMNF also conducts Sustainability training and

Compliance training for all employees to promote understanding and resolve human rights-related issues including modern slavery.

Process of consultation

In preparing this Statement and considering how each entity TMNF controls or owns identifies, addresses, reports and reviews on the risks of modern slavery, TMNF has regard to its existing internal governance framework. Paramount within this framework is TMHD's Code of Conduct, a broad conduct policy addressing issues of human rights and detailing expected behavioural standards. The Code of Conduct applies (or is adopted with minor variations) throughout all entities that TMNF controls or owns, in order to ensure, among other things, compliance with human rights (which includes avoidance of modern slavery). Further, subsidiary reporting obligations ensures ongoing consultation by TMNF with entities it controls or owns to manage all applicable risks faced by them, which would include modern slavery issues, as and when relevant. TMNF continuously assesses the appropriateness of its governance framework and will continue to do so in the future.

Future commitments

As a Group, and with the cooperation of our business partners, we will continuously work to prevent the occurrence of modern slavery and promote respect for human rights throughout our business activities including the entire value chain.
