3 Risk of modern slavery practices in operation and supply chains

Risks in Uniti Operations

The risk of modern slavery in our own operations remains low. The majority of our direct workforce is covered by employment agreements which confer pay and entitlements which are compliant with labour laws.

We have a small indirect workforce based in the Philippines that includes customer service agents and some contractors supplying software development services based in the Philippines, UAE and ex-Soviet countries. The contractors’ rates are reviewed by our HR team and are all above minimum pay rates for their respective countries of residence.

Risk in Supply Chains

The areas which present the highest risk of modern slavery remain suppliers of network and IT equipment that are manufactured offshore, and in network construction. The risks within our supply chains in this reporting year remains unchanged.

Network and IT equipment manufactured offshore

As in previous years, the largest category of supplier expenditure for Uniti remains in construction and maintenance of the built network, with other categories of significant expenditure including but not limited to network equipment, IT services, software and hardware.

The business obtains its hardware and equipment primarily from suppliers based in Australia who source the hardware and equipment from global vendors whose manufacturing facilities are overseas in low-cost labour locations. Manufacture and supply of components is primarily concentrated in high-risk geographical areas such as Asia, with deep and often complex supply chains. Although almost exclusively dealing with global suppliers who have similar obligations and concerns around modern slavery, Uniti acknowledges that this remains its most potentially at-risk category.

Network construction

Uniti's operational model remains unchanged in that it employs a large number of contractors to support construction of pit and pipe as well as field services tasks.

The risk of modern slavery in the construction industry is managed through our internal procurement processes and OH&S screening and financial checks. Contractors are also formally inducted and required to complete site-specific inductions when deployed for site work for and on behalf of the Uniti Group.

Customer support - higher risk geographies

Uniti's customer support team continues to engage with a small indirect workforce based in the Philippines who are treated as an extension of the onshore team. There is no change in the supply contract from previous reporting years.

4 Actions taken to assess and address these risks

Procurement Assessment of Risks in Supply Chains

Uniti currently does not have a formal procurement function, however, has implemented an onboarding process for new third party providers.

The onboarding process applies to all employees and business units involved in procurement. The third party onboarding process requires the completion of risk assessment for modern slavery and active management of our supply chain.

It will enable the evaluation and management of third party providers from both quality and financial perspectives. Regular reviews and updates will ensure that our supplier management processes remain aligned with Uniti's goals and objectives.

Employee Training

Uniti utilises a Human Resources Information System (HRIS) which incorporates an online learning module. A training module on Modern Slavery now forms part of standard induction. Uniti remains a member of the Telco Together Foundation and continues to participate in Modern Slavery Roundtables with other telecommunications providers. Telco Together provide valuable resources to its members which assist in internal training.

Whistleblower Hotline

In July 2023 Uniti implemented a whistleblower platform supplied by Whisplii. The whistleblower hotline is available to staff (including contractors) to enable reporting of Modern Slavery as well as other matters of concern.

Risk & Compliance Platform

Uniti has implemented an online Risk & Compliance platform which offers an integrated approach to identifying, profiling and assessing risks and developing and implementing mitigating actions. The compliance management component of the platform has been configured to include Modern Slavery obligations. Compliance reports may be reviewed by the Board on a quarterly basis to identify potential issues.

Governance

The highest level of responsibility for modern slavery sits with the Uniti Board of Directors which has oversight of strategy, business performance, compliance and risk management, including in relation to Modern Slavery.

At an operational level, our progress on modern slavery has been driven by a team which includes personnel from Legal, Risk & Compliance, OHS, and People & Culture.

5 Effectiveness of actions taken to assess and address modern slavery risks

The business will implement a third party risk management program in February 2026 which will include the review of modern slavery risks in our operations and supply chains.

The program will be reviewed annually at which time we will be in a position to assess their effectiveness.

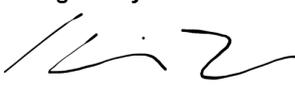

6 Consultation with controlled entities

Uniti Group operates as an integrated group of companies with the same policies and systems that apply to all subsidiaries. During the reporting period this statement covers, Uniti actively engaged and consulted with all subsidiaries in the development of this statement and discussed details of the reporting requirements. This Statement was circulated to the Executive and Senior Leadership teams for comment and endorsement before being presented to the Board for review and approval.

7 Approval
