Structure

Arthrex is headquartered in Naples, USA and has subsidiaries in 29 countries throughout the Americas, EMEA and APAC regions, including Australia and New Zealand. Arthrex also distributes its products in an additional 74 distributor locations. Arthrex Australia is a wholly-owned Australian subsidiary of Arthrex Inc. and is also the sole shareholder of a New Zealand subsidiary, Arthrex New Zealand. As at 30 June 2025, Arthrex Australia employed 207 employees and contractors, while Arthrex New Zealand employed 49 employees and contractors.

Operations

Arthrex is committed to one mission: Helping Surgeons Treat Their Patients Better™. This mission drives Arthrex's relentless commitment to product innovation, medical education and the provision of exceptional service. Our global operations are located in the APAC, LATAM, North America and EMEA regions. Employees working in the ANZ region, or alongside staff in the ANZ region, may be employed by subsidiaries based in any of these regions.

In its fourth year of operation as a direct-to-market sales organisation, Arthrex ANZ's functions and associated infrastructure and frameworks are continuously improving and maturing. Our core operations in the ANZ region are now well established, and are not anticipated to change in the near future. Direct sale, loan and consignment of medical device products and the provision of related services (including post-sale repair and services) to our customers, the delivery of medical education and training to healthcare organisations and healthcare professionals, and charitable/educational grant activities continue to be our primary functions. As Arthrex does not have local manufacturing operations, our finished products continue to be predominantly sourced from other Arthrex entities around the world (in particular, Arthrex Inc. in the USA and Arthrex GmbH in Europe), but some are also sourced from other non-Arthrex affiliated, third party suppliers. Arthrex Australia continues to operate from offices in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth, while Arthrex New Zealand continues to operate from offices in Auckland and Christchurch.

We make consistent efforts to combat modern slavery practices within our business to ensure that our operations and extended supply chains are free from such practices.

Our supply chains

While gathering supply chain information about our suppliers, Arthrex Australia consulted extensively with the appropriate organisational representatives from its related bodies corporate, including Arthrex Inc., Arthrex GmbH and Arthrex New Zealand. Information about our global supply chain can also be found here.

Arthrex ANZ's supply chain is segmented into direct and indirect procurement and continues to be structured around its parent company, Arthrex Inc., which centrally manages the majority of Arthrex's global supply chain from the USA. As with our operations, Arthrex ANZ's local direct and indirect supply chains are subjected to continuous evaluation and improvement initiatives as Arthrex ANZ continues to consolidate its direct presence in the Australian and New Zealand medical devices industries.

Direct procurement is anything which directly relates to the manufacture of Arthrex products sold and distributed by Arthrex ANZ, from the raw materials and components to any outside operations used to transform components or finished goods. Approximately 85% of Arthrex's products are manufactured in the USA. The top six countries from which goods, services or materials are sourced outside of the USA are Germany, Switzerland, Israel, Netherlands, Italy and Taiwan.

Arthrex Australia's tier one direct suppliers are predominantly other Arthrex entities (Arthrex Inc. in the USA, supplemented further by Arthrex's operations in the EMEA region). Arthrex Australia's tier two suppliers are the component, raw material and finished goods suppliers that support the manufacturing for these entities. Arthrex Australia relies, and will continue to rely in the coming years, on Arthrex Inc. and Arthrex GmbH to perform the direct procurement activities relating to the manufacture of Arthrex products as well as OEM products.

Indirect procurement is described as all other goods and services Arthrex ANZ uses in respect of the day-to-day operations of its business. Arthrex ANZ's indirect procurement largely occurs in Australia and New Zealand and includes but is not limited to:

- property leases, which includes fit out of premises and make good obligations;
- facility maintenance, cleaning services and waste management services;
- other general goods and services, such as stationery and catering;
- telecommunication and IT services and products;
- various professional services, such as accounting, legal and payroll;
- warehousing and transport & freight services;
- travel and accommodation;
- labour hire; and
- insurance.

Arthrex ANZ ensures that it is aware of any subcontractors and second or third tier suppliers that may form part of its indirect procurement supply chain. Despite many of these suppliers being located in Australia and New Zealand, Arthrex Australia is aware that some of them may procure products and services from overseas, and in some cases from high-risk jurisdictions.

Modern slavery risks

Direct procurement: Arthrex ANZ's tier one suppliers are located in countries (predominantly Arthrex entities located in the USA and Germany) that are deemed low risk according to the Walk Free Foundation's Global Slavery Index (GSI) and the US Department of Labor's 'List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor'.

In relation to Arthrex ANZ's tier two suppliers, we are aware that certain raw materials and components used in Arthrex's manufacturing (such as plastics, metals, electronics and packaging) involve industries which are typically known to be higher risk in connection with modern slavery. These risks can be exacerbated where suppliers are located in countries that are deemed moderate to high risk by the GSI or utilise/incorporate higher risk materials within their extended supply chains. Arthrex's view remains that the modern slavery risks in its extended supply chain are low, as a result of the steps taken in relation to risk identification, assessment and mitigation / avoidance (see section below entitled "Actions taken to assess and address risk in our supply chains").

Indirect procurement: In relation to our indirect procurement activities within the ANZ region, Arthrex Australia is aware of publicly available research (such as from the GSI and the Australian Human Rights Commission) and recognises that there is a higher risk of modern slavery, including forced labour, within the facility maintenance, cleaning, freight/transport and labour hire service industries.

We are also cognisant of the modern slavery risks where our second or third tier suppliers operate within developing countries in Asia.

Actions taken to assess and address risk in our supply chains

As outlined above, Arthrex ANZ procures the vast majority of its products from Arthrex Inc. in the USA and Arthrex GmbH in Europe. This section of the Modern Slavery Statement sets out the actions undertaken by these Arthrex entities (through its Global Supply Chain function, which adopts a global approach to supply chain management) in respect of raw materials and component suppliers (i.e. Arthrex ANZ's tier two suppliers) throughout the reporting period. As such, references to Arthrex in this section are to these specific Arthrex entities unless otherwise specified. Actions undertaken include ongoing due diligence and audits to identify and address the risks of modern slavery in this part of Arthrex's supply chain. Please also refer to the Arthrex Global Supply Chain Disclosure for details on the actions taken at a global level to address these risks.

In relation to Arthrex ANZ's local supply chain, we are reviewing and consolidating our existing suppliers to improve oversight, and have integrated the use of 3rd party due diligence providers as a key means of supply chain oversight.

Policies and procedures

As part of an ongoing initiative to identify and mitigate risks, Arthrex continuously works to improve its policies and practices to ensure materials and services provided to Arthrex are procured only from suppliers who share this same level of commitment. In 2025, Arthrex implemented a Global Policy on Corporate Responsibility, which consolidated Arthrex's commitment to human rights, environmental sustainability and standards, anti-bribery and anti-corruption, and data privacy and security. This supplemented Arthrex's existing human risk framework which comprised of (amongst other things) its Global Policy on Human Rights and a Global Procedure for Human Rights and Environmental Standards. The framework operates to prohibit the use of slavery and human trafficking in all Arthrex global facilities and by suppliers in Arthrex's global supply chain. Arthrex also provides several communication channels for reporting concerns or violations in good faith, including but not limited to the Arthrex Ethics Helpline.

Within the ANZ region, Arthrex ANZ adopts, and ensures that its personnel comply with, the Global Code of Conduct and Global Policy on Human Rights. These are buttressed by Arthrex ANZ's Australian Whistleblower Policy and New Zealand Whistleblower Policy, and the associated training provided to Arthrex ANZ employees which is aimed at fostering a workplace environment that upholds and celebrates high ethical standards and a strong speak up culture. Collectively, Arthrex's policies and training sessions empower and inform staff and contractors alike to identify, address and report modern slavery concerns. As part of our commitment to continuous improvement, we regularly review our local policies and practices to ensure that procedures stemming from those policies prevent modern slavery practices and integrate ways to address and mitigate modern slavery risks in the supply chain where they do arise.

Governance

Good corporate governance is fundamental to Arthrex activities. Arthrex maintains a comprehensive Global Risk Management & Compliance program to prevent and detect violations of the Global Code of Conduct, company policies and applicable laws and regulations, including those which relate to human rights violations. Arthrex has a process in place for entering, managing and investigating reports received through the Arthrex Ethics Helpline, which is supplemented in ANZ by its bespoke local whistleblower frameworks. The Global Risk & Compliance Committee oversees any reportable events, potential risk areas and risk management activities and monitors the effectiveness of the Global Risk Management & Compliance program.

Verification / Due Diligence

Arthrex is committed to fair labour practices within its supply chain and expects its suppliers to meet these expectations. As such, Arthrex conducts supplier assessments to assess risk related to supply chain matters including modern slavery, and to identify areas for suppliers to implement effective controls within their own organisations. In addition, suppliers are required to provide a Certificate of Origin positively affirming the country of origin of all products sold to Arthrex. Arthrex Inc. continually seeks to enhance supplier due diligence by integrating controls into the existing global third-party risk management process. In 2025, Arthrex commenced a process of evaluating the third-party platforms used to conduct due diligence on existing suppliers and to investigate the background of potential new suppliers to assess the risk of non-compliance with laws, including those related to slavery, human trafficking and other human rights.

This evaluation process is ongoing and, in the meantime, Arthrex continues to utilise its existing third-party risk management tool to provide information on current supplier risks, as well as regular newsfeed updates on labour practices and other human rights risks.

Audits

Arthrex monitors and evaluates supplier behaviour and compliance through scheduled internal audits to improve visibility, leverage and oversight of its supply chain. As part of these audits, suppliers are reviewed on the implementation of policies prohibiting all forms of human trafficking and forced labour as well as other supply chain information that can assist with identification of modern slavery risks. Arthrex currently focuses its efforts on high risk or critical suppliers, determined by various risk factors including but not limited to the supplier location, materials supplied and propensity for utilisation of slavery, human trafficking or forced labour.

Certification

To ensure Arthrex suppliers respect and enforce company standards, all Arthrex suppliers continue to be bound by contractual terms that mandate compliance with the Arthrex Code of Conduct, and all applicable laws and regulations in their respective countries, including but not limited to, the prohibition against slavery, human trafficking and any other practice that violates human rights as defined within the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights. A supplier's failure to provide certification affirming compliance with the prohibition against slavery, human trafficking, and other human rights violations may result in corrective action up to and including termination of the business relationship. In addition, Arthrex mandates that its suppliers warrant that products sold to Arthrex do not contain conflict minerals as such term is defined in the “Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act,” or any other mineral or its derivatives determined by the U.S. Secretary of State to be financing conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) or adjoining countries.

Accountability

Arthrex maintains internal accountability standards and procedures applicable to both employees and suppliers who fail to meet Arthrex standards.

Arthrex provides channels for employees and third parties to report potential non-compliance and has procedures in place for investigating, substantiating and remediating reports of potential human rights violations. One such channel is Arthrex’s Ethics Helpline. This helpline is made available to the public via Arthrex’s websites, and all employees receive training on its use. Reports can be made via the helpline in the reporter’s local language as well as on a confidential or anonymous basis so that they can be properly investigated and remedied without fear of retaliation. Arthrex continues to maintain a process for the analysis and review of potential non-compliances. Where a non-compliance is identified, a corrective action plan, up to and including termination of employment or arrangements, is put in place.

The global policies and procedures mentioned are further complemented within the ANZ region by Arthrex ANZ’s previously mentioned Whistleblower Policies, which are specifically tailored to the legal frameworks within the region.

Training

Arthrex requires all employees to undertake a Code of Conduct Policy and Training Program, in relation to matters covered by its Global Code of Conduct. Employees are required to undertake this program on an annual basis. During this program, employees are required to demonstrate their understanding of the requirements under the Global Code of Conduct through various training modules. In addition, all employees are required to undertake a training module specifically focused on its Global Human Rights Policy. All employees are then required to review and sign the Global Code of Conduct and the Global Human Rights Policy to confirm their awareness of risks associated with modern slavery and commitment to meet Arthrex’s expectations regarding how those risks ought to be reported and managed. Finally, Arthrex employees with direct involvement or responsibility for supply chain and operations receive specific training focused on identification and risk mitigation of modern slavery, human trafficking, and other human rights.

Arthrex routinely reviews policies to ensure content is up-to-date and implement tracking mechanisms to ensure training has been successfully completed.

Effectiveness of measures taken

Arthrex periodically evaluates the effectiveness of the actions being taken to address slavery, human trafficking and other human rights risks in our supply chain. In addition, Arthrex continually reviews its risk assessment processes to identify new factors and methods that can be applied.

In relation to the ANZ region, Arthrex ANZ actively collaborates with Arthrex and its other related bodies corporate in this global effort. In the subsequent reporting period, Arthrex ANZ will assess the effectiveness of the actions taken at a local level, including assessing the way in which risks are assessed and measured, identifying process gaps, and developing improvements to its risk management framework. Arthrex ANZ will seek to report on the effectiveness of actions being taken to address slavery, human trafficking and other human rights risks, both at the global and local levels, in a measurable, transparent and objective way.

As at the date of this Modern Slavery Statement, all Arthrex ANZ employees who were employed during FY2025 have completed training in Arthrex's Global Code of Conduct and Global Human Rights Policy, as well as reviewed and signed the Global Human Rights Policy and Global Human Rights Policy.

Next steps

We plan to make progress through the following actions over the next reporting period:

- continue consultation with tier one and two suppliers to address modern slavery risks
- where reasonably practicable, in respect of procurement, continue to ensure contracts with new suppliers and contract renewals incorporate modern slavery requirements and/or compliance with the supplier codes of conduct
- continue to review modern slavery training content and roll out amongst the relevant Arthrex teams
- review procurement policies and procedures, including tender processes to adequately address modern slavery risks
- build a more detailed understanding of the procurement supply chain as it develops.
