Risks of Modern Slavery Practices

We acknowledge that certain aspects of our operations and supply chains may be susceptible to modern slavery risks, particularly considering the global nature and geographic scope of our activities. The key risks relating to Modern Slavery are as follows:

Labour Exploitation Risk: The risk that labour is exploited in terms of workload, wages, living arrangements and travel freedom.

Recruitment and Supply Chain Risk: Risks related to the use of bonded recruitment and unlicensed labour supply sources.

Regional and Political Risk: Relating to operations in areas where enforcement of labour standards is weak.

Reputational and Stakeholder Risk: Relating to media coverage and scandals and worker protests.

Compliance and Governance Risk: Relating to non compliance with Modern Slavery Acts.

Actions to Assess and Address Risks

Blackmagic Design Pty. Ltd is committed to ethical business practices and human rights. During the reporting period, we have implemented the following measures:

Supplier Code of Conduct: We have a Supplier Code of Conduct requiring all suppliers to adhere to international human rights standards.

Due Diligence: We conducted due diligence processes when auditing new suppliers, including risk assessments and follow up audits.

Training and Awareness: Provide training for employees involved with supplier audits to heighten awareness about modern slavery and how to identify and respond to associated risks.

Supplier Visits: Regular audits of our manufacturing facilities and selected suppliers, including on site visits to ensure quality of manufactured components and compliance with our ethical standards.

Compliance: Operational management are responsible for managing the risks as part of their day to day operations. This is overseen by senior management, taking into consideration any additional actions that may be appropriate to maintain compliance.

Effectiveness of Actions

To evaluate the effectiveness of our actions, we regularly review supply chain audits and re assess potential risks. Improvements are made as required based on these evaluations to enhance our approach to modern slavery risk management.
