REA Group's supply chains

Operating model

REA Group operates a central procurement team located in Melbourne that is responsible for high value or complex procurement of goods and services, on behalf of REA Group businesses. This team administers several of the key policies addressing supply chain risks, including modern slavery risks. Lower value procurement decisions are decentralised across REA Group's various business units and geographies.

The nature of REA Group's supplier relationships is highly variable. REA Group has written contracts with most suppliers, which are generally on a rolling 1-2 year contract cycle. Some supplier arrangements are subscription based and can be varied or terminated on a short notice period.

REA India operates its own procurement, legal and risk management functions. REA India has adopted policies and procedures which mirror those of REA Group Australia, with localisation as appropriate to comply with local law or custom.

Overview of modern slavery risks

We have carried out a risk assessment of the potential for modern slavery practices within the operations and supply chains of REA Group.

The assessment of modern slavery risks was carried out by representatives from REA Group's central procurement, risk and legal functions, based in Australia, and members of REA India's procurement function. These representatives form part of REA Group's modern slavery governance group.

Risks in our operations

REA Group is a designer and developer of digital products and software experiences, and a provider of mortgage broking services and finance for vendor paid advertising and home preparation. Due to the nature of REA Group's services, their predominantly online distribution channels and the skilled workers that contribute to them, we consider that the inherent risk of modern slavery practices within our Australian operations is low.

REA India operates in a market which has a higher inherent risk of modern slavery practices due to weaker legal and governance standards. REA India has sought to address the risks of operating in this market by adopting robust policies and due diligence processes, in line with those adopted by REA Group Australia, with localisation as appropriate to comply with local law or custom.

Risks in our supply chains

We have assessed the inherent risk of modern slavery practices in our supply chains, having regard to:

1. the supplier's country of operation;⁵
2. the types of goods or services supplied;⁶ and
3. propensity for use of unskilled, transient or migrant labour in the supplier's industry.

These risk factors were identified having regard to third party data sources, such as the Walk Free Global Slavery Index 2018 and 2023.

Based on the risk assessment that was completed, we have determined that the inherent risk of modern slavery practices within REA Group's contracted supplier relationships is generally low. This is because REA Group's expenditure is weighted toward lower risk supplier categories such as technology (software, data and communications), business services and marketing. REA Group's risk profile is further reduced because a large majority of REA Group's suppliers are based in developed economies with stronger labour laws and lower prevalence of modern slavery practices.

We have identified the following as procurement categories that may carry a higher inherent risk of forced labour, bonded labour or other modern slavery practices:

- External contractors – REA Group engages third party consultancies which provide REA Group with specialised software development services from offshore delivery centres based in Xi'an, China and Gurgaon, India⁷ as well as administrative support services from Manila, Philippines.
- Merchandise and branded clothing – REA Group sources branded clothing for its workers as well as merchandise (pens, notebooks, drink bottles, umbrellas, coffee cups, phone chargers and carry bags) which is distributed to REA Group customers. These goods are typically manufactured in China and may carry elevated modern slavery risks.
- Cleaning services – REA Group has contracted cleaning service providers at its offices in Australia and India. Those cleaners work from REA Group's offices but REA Group does not otherwise have direct oversight of their employment arrangements.
- Computer hardware and peripherals – REA Group purchases laptops, mobile phones and other computer peripherals through resellers based in Australia. These products may include components or minerals sourced from countries with higher prevalence of modern slavery.
- General office supplies – REA Group purchases a range of general office supplies, including coffee, tea, foodstuffs, office furniture, printing materials and stationery which are purchased from generalist retailers. These goods may include materials or components that are sourced from or assembled in developing markets. REA Group has no visibility over these supply chains and limited capacity to conduct due diligence on the suppliers in these procurement categories because most of the products are purchased on an ad hoc basis.

5 With emphasis in FY24 being on suppliers with operations in countries with a higher vulnerability to modern slavery practices due to weaker governance and labour laws. These are countries with an overall risk rating of > 40.0 in the 2023 Walk Free Global Slavery Index.

6 With a focus on suppliers of electronics, clothing, branded merchandise, cleaning services, local drivers and security services.

7 There may also be a small number of contractors based in other cities in China and India who support the work carried out by the offshore delivery centres.

Risks that we cause, contribute to or are linked to modern slavery practices through our operations or supply chains

Risks that we cause modern slavery practices through our operations

We consider the inherent risk that REA Group directly causes forced labour, human trafficking or other modern slavery practices through its operations is low. REA Group's direct workforce in Australia and India consists primarily of highly skilled technology workers, product, sales and marketing staff and business support services staff. These employees are predominantly full-time employees who are employed in accordance with local labour laws, paid fairly at market rates and typically work during business hours from an office setting or at home under hybrid work arrangements.

We also consider the inherent risk of usage of underage or child labour within REA Group's operations to be low. In particular, due to the specialised nature of the digital products created by REA Group, employment candidates have typically completed tertiary study and significantly exceed the minimum working age.

Risks that we contribute to modern slavery practices through our operations and supply chains

REA Group acknowledges that in the absence of suitable controls, it could contribute to modern slavery practices through:

- unrealistic pricing or delivery expectations for certain procurement categories (e.g. branded merchandise and garments); and
- the usage of outsourced labour in developing markets over which REA Group has less control.

Some of the steps taken to address these risks are set out in the sections Ethical Procurement Training and Management of outsourced labour suppliers.

Risks that we are linked to modern slavery practices through our operations or supply chains

Our offshore operations

While REA Group's overall risk profile is low, it is possible that REA Group could be linked to modern slavery practices through its minority and majority stakes in overseas property advertising portals. In particular, portals operating in Singapore, India, Malaysia, Thailand and Vietnam have a higher inherent risk of being linked to modern slavery practices due to less stringent governance than the standards and processes applied in Australia and a higher prevalence of modern slavery practices in these territories.⁸

Due to the independent operation of the Malaysia, Thailand and Vietnam operations (of which REA Group holds only a minority interest) REA Group did not have direct oversight of the procurement decisions and some facets of the governance structures of these businesses during FY24.

Notwithstanding that our offshore operations operate in higher risk jurisdictions, we consider that the risk within these operations is inherently low because their workforces consist of skilled professionals who work in an office setting and support the delivery of digital products, websites and mobile software applications. Further, the procurement categories of these businesses are predominantly lower risk technology (software, data and communications), business services and facilities categories.

Our indirect workforce

As part of its operations, REA Group has an indirect workforce consisting of highly skilled technology contractors based in Xi'an, China and Gurgaon, India and administrative contractors based in Manila, Philippines. Given that REA Group does not directly employ these workers, set their working conditions, or manage the offshore delivery centres, there is a higher inherent risk of modern slavery amongst this workforce.⁹

⁸ Walk Free Global Slavery Index 2018, p.156-8, 178-9.

⁹ While not directly employed by REA Group, some of the contractors in India work on REA Group premises, mitigating modern slavery risk to a certain extent.

Actions taken by REA Group to assess and address modern slavery risks, including due diligence and remediation processes

Assessing modern slavery risks within REA Group’s supply chains

Supplier risk assessments

A high-level risk assessment of new REA Group suppliers¹⁰ on-boarded during FY24 was conducted based on the following criteria:

1. the supplier’s country of operation;
2. the types of goods or services supplied; and
3. propensity for use of unskilled, transient or migrant labour in the supplier’s industry.

These criteria were used to identify suppliers which had an elevated inherent risk of modern slavery practices. During FY24, REA Group Australia identified 3.76% of its new supplier requests met one or more of the identified risk factors. The suppliers flagged under the risk assessment included organisations with operations or supply chains in Australia, Malaysia, and South Africa, with goods and services provided by those suppliers including cleaning services, administrative support, software development and consulting and merchandise sourcing.

REA India completed a similar risk assessment across its new suppliers, with 8.05% of its tier one suppliers shortlisted. This included suppliers providing outsourced labour, merchandise, IT procurement and electronics.

Supplier due diligence for higher risk suppliers

REA Group has adopted further due diligence measures for suppliers assessed as having a higher inherent modern slavery risk.

During FY24, a Supplier Assessment Questionnaire was sent to the REA Group Australia and REA India tier one suppliers which met one or more of the identified risk factors (as outlined above). The questionnaire comprises 25 questions relating to the policies and procedures of the supplier, their supply chain visibility, modern slavery responsibility, training programs, response processes and employment conditions. The questionnaire also requires explicit acceptance of the REA Group Supplier Code of Conduct and disclosure of any instances of non-compliance with the Code.

The completed Supplier Assessment Questionnaires were reviewed by members of REA Group Australia’s legal and procurement teams and REA India’s procurement team. The review did not reveal any indicators or instances of modern slavery practices within the shortlisted group of suppliers.

However, a small number of suppliers in India were flagged as providing insufficient information in response to the questionnaire (refer Results of supplier screening below).

REA Group takes a considered approach to reviewing responses to questionnaires, having regard to the supplier’s industry and size. REA Group looks for indicators of poor governance or exploitative labour practices across all questionnaire responses but does not expect small suppliers to have the same systems and frameworks as large suppliers. For example, we would not necessarily expect small suppliers to have a formal human rights or modern slavery policy or specific staff training programmes for modern slavery. However, REA Group would expect that all suppliers have processes to check that they are not using child labour, that they are not retaining workers’ documentation and that they provide their employees with pay slips and a contract of employment in a language they understand. For suppliers of goods, we would also expect there to be a level of visibility around the sourcing of products and a pathway toward increasing visibility of supply chains, including through due diligence programs.

Actions taken by REA Group to assess and address modern slavery risks, including due diligence and remediation processes

In Australia, in FY24, REA Group sent questionnaires to 13 tier one suppliers. All 13 suppliers were cleared based on questionnaire responses.

REA India sent questionnaires to 19 suppliers and all responded. 16 were cleared and three of them were deactivated and are not being engaged with for any business transactions. The three suppliers that were deactivated did not meet REA India's compliance parameters, even following detailed clarification of their Modern Slavery policies and supply chain processes.

Supplier audits

REA Group did not conduct any supplier audits during FY24.

Addressing modern slavery risks within REA Group's supply chains

Supplier Code of Conduct

REA Group's Supplier Code of Conduct sets out the minimum standards required of suppliers in the areas of workers' rights and human rights, anti-bribery and anti-corruption laws and other laws in relation to business integrity, privacy, health and safety, and environmental considerations. Suppliers must also have adequate policies and procedures in place to monitor compliance with these laws and must ensure that any authorised sub-contractors also comply with these minimum standards. REA India has adopted a similar Supplier Code of Conduct for its suppliers.

All new suppliers must agree to REA Group's Supplier Code of Conduct as part of supplier onboarding or REA must be satisfied that the supplier complies with equivalent obligations pursuant to its own internal policies and procedures. REA also sends periodic reminders to all its suppliers about compliance with the REA Group Supplier Code of Conduct, with the latest email reminder sent in June 2023.

In FY24, REA Group continued to embed compliance with the Supplier Code of Conduct, and related audit obligations, into the contracts of certain suppliers that were deemed to carry an elevated risk of modern slavery practices based on our risk assessment criteria.

Contractual clauses

REA Group's standard form supplier agreements include appropriate modern slavery clauses requiring suppliers to comply with the REA Group Code of Conduct, take reasonable steps to identify, assess and address risks of modern slavery practices in their operations and supply chains and to promptly remediate any harm to impacted individuals which is uncovered as a result of these due diligence processes. Where REA Group is contracting on a supplier's standard contract terms and the supplier falls within REA Group's risk criteria, REA Group will seek to include modern slavery compliance clauses in the contract.

Ethical procurement training

Since FY21, all members of REA Group's central procurement team have completed ethical procurement and supply training provided online by the Chartered Institute of Procurement & Supply.

This training is undertaken to ensure that REA Group procurement personnel can recognise indicators of modern slavery practices and that REA Group can address the risk that it could contribute to modern slavery practices through unrealistic expectations about the price or delivery timeframes to be met by suppliers.

Addressing modern slavery risks within REA Group's supply chains

Annual employee compliance training

In FY22, REA India incorporated an interactive modern slavery training module into its annual compliance refresher course. To date, the training has been completed by 100% of employees including 591 new starters.

In FY24, REA Group Australia deployed a similar module in its annual new employee onboarding training. During FY24, the training was completed by 389 new employees (98.5% of new employees).

Supplier training

In FY24, REA Group did not request any supplier to complete a modern slavery training module.

Management of outsourced labour suppliers

REA Group has a number of practices which provide oversight of day to day working conditions for outsourced workers:

- realestate.com.au employees have regular video conferences with software developers at the Xi'an and Gurgaon delivery centres;
- Mortgage Choice mortgage brokers have direct 1:1 relationships with outsourced administrative support staff in the Philippines and communicate on a daily basis; and
- REA Group's expenditure with the outsourced providers is in line with market rates.

Addressing modern slavery risks within our operations

REA Group Australia Policy Framework

REA Group has a detailed governance and policy framework which significantly reduces the risk of modern slavery practices within REA Group's direct workforce and operations. This includes:

- REA Group's Modern Slavery Policy and Framework;
- the REA Group Code of Conduct, Employment Handbook and Equality in Employment Policy which together set out the behavioural standards required of all REA Group employees. The Code of Conduct also applies to contractors, consultants and visitors working for REA Group;
- the REA Group Risk Management Policy which sets out the framework for identifying and managing strategic, operational, compliance and regulatory risk across REA Group's businesses;
- the REA Group Procurement Policy which sets out the process for engaging and onboarding new suppliers, including relevant management approvals;

- REA Group's Contract Approval Procedure which requires a business lead to obtain approvals from legal, risk, procurement and finance business partners before a new contract can be signed by management;
- the Permanent Residency at REA Group Policy which sets out the circumstances in which REA Group will sponsor employees for permanent residency;
- REA Group's anti bribery and corruption program and its related policy; Doing Business Ethically and with Integrity; and
- REA Group's Whistleblower Policy.

This policy framework assists in embedding a strong culture of compliance across REA Group's operations. REA Group's policies and processes are periodically reviewed to ensure they remain fit for purpose.

REA India Policy Framework

REA India has its own localised policies, which closely align to the corresponding policy framework of REA Group Australia. This includes the:

- REA India Modern Slavery Policy and Framework;
- REA India Supplier Code of Conduct;
- REA India Whistleblower Policy; and
- REA India Employee Code of Conduct.

REA India has also adopted REA Group Australia's Risk Management Policy.

Employee onboarding controls

REA Group has controls which reduce the risk that we could inadvertently employ individuals that are under the minimum working age.

In REA Group's Australian operations, an underage candidate would be identified through our employee screening process, including through the interview stage, completion of tax authority forms or through photo identification provided by candidates.

In India, REA India's Human Resources Information System does not allow for the creation of profiles or release of employment offers to individuals aged under 18 years.

Assessing modern slavery risks within REA Group investments

REA Group does not have processes for assessing modern slavery risks within businesses in which it holds only a minority interest.

REA India utilises the same risk assessment processes and procedures as REA Group Australia.

Addressing modern slavery risks within REA Group's supply chains

continued

Remediation processes

Whistleblower Policy

REA Group's Whistleblower Policy allows for anonymous reports to be made by REA Group employees, officers, consultants, sub-contractors and suppliers and their employees (and all relatives, dependents and spouses of these individuals) in relation to conduct that is illegal, fraudulent, corrupt, unethical, or that entails unsafe work practices, abuse of authority or other acts that are inconsistent with REA Group values and behaviours, including modern slavery practices such as people trafficking, slavery, servitude, forced marriage, forced labour, debt bondage, deceptive recruitment and child labour. REA India retains its own Whistleblower policy covering the operations of the Indian businesses housing.com, proptiger.com and makaan.com. It is published on each of these websites and has been brought to the attention of local staff and contractors.

Reports can be made to the REA Group Executive Leadership Team, Chief Risk Officer or anonymously to the Chair of the Audit, Risk and Compliance Committee, via the independently operated Deloitte whistleblower telephone hotline (available in Australia) or by making a report online which may be made anonymously at www.REAgroup.deloitte.com.au (available to individuals located in all regions).

Separate to the REA Group channels, individuals can also make disclosures to any of the individuals specified under the whistleblower protection laws (e.g. any director or company secretary of REA Ltd or a related body corporate, legal practitioners for the purposes of obtaining legal advice, auditors or regulatory bodies, amongst others).

The REA Group Whistleblower Policy and Deloitte whistleblower hotline were brought to the attention of high-risk suppliers through the Supplier Assessment Questionnaire.

REA Group has not received any reports of modern slavery risks or breaches of the Supplier Code of Conduct, via its whistleblower channels.

Responding to reports of modern slavery

REA Group will promptly investigate any reports through the above channels which relate to potential violations of labour laws or reports of forced labour, child labour or other modern slavery practices. REA Group will respect the privacy and communication preferences of any complainant during the investigation of any report, including by preserving anonymity of complainants where requested and following up with the complainant after any investigation.

Responding to indicators of modern slavery or poor governance practices

If REA Group's supplier due diligence reveals process deficiencies or areas of concern in a supplier's practices, we will work proactively with the supplier to improve its governance and practices. If areas of concern are not remedied, REA Group will reassess its future relationship with the relevant supplier, and outcomes may include suspension or termination of supplier relationships.

Where suppliers are flagged using REA Group's risk assessment criteria, but decline to complete REA Group's supplier assessment questionnaire, REA Group will endeavour to assess the supplier based on publicly available materials such as human rights statements, modern slavery policies, ethical sourcing and conflict minerals policies. Where this is not possible, REA Group will deactivate the supplier, so that new orders cannot be placed by employees until due diligence has been completed.

Supplier feedback

REA Group has made available a contact point for concerns or feedback concerning its Supplier Code of Conduct through its central procurement team. Some suppliers have indicated that they will comply with the standards of their own analogous code of conduct, instead of REA Group's Code. In such situations, REA Group reviews the supplier's code of conduct to ensure it contains equivalent obligations and protections.

Assessing the effectiveness of our actions

FY25 Action Plan

REA Group has identified the following as intended actions during FY25:

- Further embedding the Supplier Code of Conduct into the contracts of higher risk suppliers, as those contracts come up for renewal; and
