THE RISKS OF MODERN SLAVERY

BWX recognises that its supply chain has the risk of modern slavery including the risk that participants in its supply chain do not pay their workers fair wages; that they use forced or bonded labour; that there are insufficient health and safety conditions for workers; that there are excessive working hours or unpaid overtime; that workers do not have freedom of association; or that there is gender discrimination or a lack of equal opportunities for workers in the workplace.

BWX has exposure to these risks through:

- a) its reliance on third-party contract manufacturers for the manufacture of finished branded products;
- b) its reliance on third-party suppliers of raw materials and components;
- c) the purchase of finished goods for re-sale on its e-commerce website; and
- d) the reliance on third-party suppliers of services.

BWX has very limited exposure to the risks of modern slavery through the employees, contractors and labour-hire employees that work at its directly-controlled facility based in Dandenong South in Australia. This is because all employees are engaged under an enterprise bargaining agreement, an individual contract of employment or a contractor agreement, and labour-hire employees are engaged with a single reputable third-party labour-hire provider.

BWX contracts with a number of third-party contract manufacturers and raw material suppliers, or purchases finished goods from select suppliers. There is a risk that these manufacturers or suppliers have modern slavery in their supply chain.

BWX enters contracts for services in connection with the operation of its business. These may relate to labour hire (as discussed above), cleaning, waste management, maintenance, marketing, advertising, specialist advisors, etc. When it engages with service providers, BWX does so subject to arms-length contractual terms and ensures that it engages reputable suppliers. For those service agreements for which are white-collar in nature (such as marketing or advertising), the risk of modern slavery is considered to be very low.

STEPS TAKEN TO MITIGATE THE RISKS OF MODERN SLAVERY

The responsibility to mitigate the risk of modern slavery in the BWX supply chain is overseen by the Board of BWX with the implementation of the anti-modern slavery program being delegated to management with reporting back to the Board. Group Procurement, having responsibility for the purchase of raw materials, components and finished goods on behalf of BWX, is tasked with the management of the modern slavery program. The risk of modern slavery in the supply chain is a risk that is recognised, rated and treated under the BWX enterprise risk management plan.

In FY20, the BWX Board endorsed the Supplier Code of Conduct (Code) which encompasses the commitment of BWX to mitigate the risks of modern slavery in its supply chain. In FY21, Group Procurement has now either rolled out the Code, or obtained confirmation that suppliers have an equivalent Code, for 99% of raw material and packaging suppliers, and co-manufacturers throughout its entire supply chain. In FY22 and beyond, Group Procurement will commence a program of rolling audits of suppliers based on a risk assessment of the supplier (see below for details).

To the extent that a supplier is unable or unwilling to adopt the Code or provide details of an equivalent code, Group Procurement will explore the reasons why the Code cannot be adopted and determine whether the Group should maintain a supplier relationship with that supplier. Where a supplier breaches the Code, Group Procurement will work with the supplier to understand and rectify the breach. If the breach is too serious or is ongoing in nature, Group Procurement will terminate supply arrangements with the supplier.

CONTINUED

To identify and mitigate the risk of modern slavery across BWX global supply chain, Group Procurement established a Supplier Risk Assessment Model, which assesses current suppliers against a range of risk factors. This will generate a list of select suppliers for further review and additional steps may be taken to assess the supplier for modern slavery risk including physical inspections of the factory; ongoing and more frequent audit than other suppliers; receiving written confirmation from managers that the Code is implemented and followed, etc.

In future years, the Group will review partnering with social audit firms such as Sedex to assist it to assess suppliers on a number of criteria that are relevant to identifying and mitigating the risk of modern slavery in its global supply chain. The Group also intends to work directly with key suppliers to assist suppliers to meet the sustainability goals of the Group, including in relation to labour rights and environmental management.

In addition to the above, Group Procurement also developed and rolled out Supplier pre-qualification and self-assessment questionnaires applicable for any new supplier wanting to do business with BWX.

There is significant focus on placing key suppliers under formal supply contracts with obligations on suppliers to adhere to our Code and that all purchases are governed by Purchase Order terms and conditions which include the Code.

The Nourished Life business operated by BWX has also adopted the "Nourish Matrix" which is a proprietary tool used to screen suppliers to ensure that the suppliers of finished goods to Nourished Life have met criteria around organic, natural or eco-certification; the sourcing and use of ingredients in products; no animal testing; demonstrable commitments to minimising environmental impact; and having undertaken a product lifecycle assessment. The strict criteria to become a supplier on the Nourished Life website and the in-depth review performed by the Nourished Life business helps to mitigate the risk of modern slavery in the supply chain of this business.

ASSESSMENT OF THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE PROGRAM

The Board of BWX has the ultimate responsibility to assess the ongoing effectiveness of the anti-modern slavery program of BWX.

The anti-modern slavery program of BWX is currently early in its maturity model, with a Supplier Code of Conduct and risk management tools being created and implemented by a Group Procurement. The key improvements in FY21 has been to roll-out the Code to 99% of all raw material and packaging suppliers, and co-manufacturers.

The Board will periodically assess the effectiveness of the anti-modern slavery program of BWX including:

- a) Monitoring the procedures of the Group against global best practices as well as industry peers;
- b) Ensuring that the processing to assess risk are relevant and up-to-date;
- c) Encourage Group Procurement to develop benchmarks concerning monitoring of suppliers and refine the process for onboarding and assessing new suppliers;
- d) Confirm that employees are trained in the Code and are aware of the risks of modern slavery; and
- e) Engage specialist providers to test the anti-modern slavery procedures.
